Estonia	2024	Estonia/ Tallinn Circuit Court / 1-21-1474	https://www.rigiteataja.ee/kohtulahendid/fail.html?id=364242877	Racial or ethnic origin	Tallinn Circuit Court /Tallinna Ringkonnakohus	The complainant, released early from prison, violated multiple probation conditions: failing to live at the designated address, not attending scheduled appointments, and using illegal drugs. The court revoked his early release, returning him to prison.	The complainant's early release was revoked. He was returned to prison to complete his original sentence. This emphasizes the consequences of non-compliance with court-ordered probation.	The court found the complainant's violations serious and deliberate, showing a lack of remorse and willingness to comply with probation. His explanations for non-compliance were deemed insufficient. Therefore, the court revoked his early release.	The case highlights the importance of complying with probation conditions. Failure to comply, especially repeated and intentional violations, can lead to revocation of early release. The court's interpretation focuses on assessing the seriousness of the violations and the offender's attitude.	Samas ringkonnakohtule esitatud kaebuses on ta uuesti avaldanud, et kuivõrd ta on moslem, ei sobi See programmi taie. See annab üksnes tunnistust sellest, et K.R. annab läbimõtetamult lubadusi, mida ta plaani ning seda üksnes selleks, et vältida vangistust. (Para 10). "At the same time in his appeal to the district court he has again expressed that as he is a Muslim it is not appropriate program for him. This only proves that K. R. gives without thinking promises that he apparently does not plan to keep and only to avoid imprisonment. "
