The defendant also made disparaging remarks like "Get out of my country" and "What are you looking at, you Moor" while assaulting him.	It confirmed the ruling issued by dismissing the appeal filed by the defendant's defense.	The defendant's actions addressed the victim with the derogatory terms due to his skin color and referred to and, subsequently, physically attacked him and his son and shows or reaffirms his superiority over the victim by reason of his origin. Despite being arrested he again manifested in the presence of police officer number 523 the same or similar expression: "Moor of shit".	The implicit contempt that discriminatory expression entails for the person being discriminated against is linked to the dignity of and human dignity. As a result, the latter is only protected by the typicity of hatred of the dignity and right to consideration and extends to those who have the concept of humiliation, but not know, previously and without it having been any previous discussion or confrontation, the mere intention of humiliating or denigrating him because of their racial origin, he snapped at Mr. [...] with phrases such as " look moor [...] and "Go to your country".	"[...] el que no existiera previamente y sin que hubiera existido ninguna discusión o enfrentamiento previo, con intención de humillarlo o menospreciarlo por el origen racial de [...] reaccionó agredi al Sr. [...]con frases tales como "mira moro de mierda" y "vete a tu país". "I [...] they did not know previously and without it having been any previous discussion or confrontation, the mere intention of humiliating or denigrating him because of their racial origin, he snapped at Mr. [...] with phrases such as " look moor [...] and "Go to your country".
