Anti-Muslim Hate Crime Data.	https://hatecrime.osce.org/anti-muslim-hate-crime?year=2023	Hate crime	International Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe's (OSCE) Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (ODHIR)	The ODHIR's Anti-Muslim Hate Crime Database, as part of the OSCE, collects and presents data on hate crimes against Muslims since 2009. It includes information submitted by participating states, civil society, and international organizations. The database aims to provide a comprehensive overview of incidents, helping to inform targeted policies and support for victims. It is updated annually and results in annual country reports.	The data on this website is largely provided by National Points of Contact on Hate Crimes (NPCs), appointed by OSCE participating States' governments. The focus is on collecting data related to specific bias motivations as requested by ODHIR. Reports from civil society groups, intergovernmental organizations, and the Holy See are also included. ODHIR's annual hate crime reporting involves several stages: issuing a call for submissions, analyzing and assessing data for inclusion, releasing data for consultation, and reviewing amendments and late submissions before final presentation.	Note: A higher incidence of hate crimes recorded and reported by a particular state does not necessarily mean that more hate crimes are being committed there; the statistics may simply reflect a broader definition of hate crimes or a more effective system for recording data. A higher incidence of hate crimes recorded by NGOs in relation to specific bias motivations or particular countries also does not mean that more hate crimes are being committed in relation to a particular bias motivation. This may reflect a higher capacity of organizations to monitor certain types of hate crime.	Not applicable - national level
