Section A: General information on existing situation: probation measures, alternative sanctions and supervision measures as an alternative to pre-trial detention

Q1. Please outline the specific probation measures or alternative sanctions that are available at the post-trial stage in the Member State on which you are reporting:

Under Act C of 2012 on the Criminal Code (hereinafter: Criminal Code)¹ sanctions, penalties and measures may be applied. Under Article 33 (1) the main alternative penalties are: community service work or fine(s), while alternative measures covered under Article 63 (1) are a) warning; b) conditional sentence; c) work performed in amends; d) probation with supervision (Criminal Code). “If the criminal offence committed carries a maximum sentence of three years imprisonment, this term may be substituted by custodial arrest, community service work, fine(s), prohibition of the right to exercise professional activity, driving ban, prohibition from residing in a particular area, ban from visiting sport events, or expulsion, or by any combination of these.” (Article 33 (4), Criminal Code) “If the criminal offence committed carries a penalty of custodial arrest, this penalty may be substituted or combined with, community service work, fine(s), prohibition of the right to exercise professional activity, driving ban, ban from visiting sporting events or expulsion, or by any combination of these” (Article 33 (5), Criminal Code). The following penalties may not be imposed concurrently: a) imprisonment with custodial arrest or community service work; b) expulsion with community service work or fine(s) (Article 33 (6), Criminal Code).

1. When the court pronounces the sentence following trial:

a) The court may sentence a person to community service work, which must be performed as prescribed, taking into consideration the individual’s health and education. (Article 47 (4), Criminal Code).

b) The court may give a warning to any person who committed an act that constitutes negligible danger, or no danger at all, to society at the time of rendering judgment, thereby making unnecessary even the minimum penalty or measure applicable (Article 64 (1), Criminal Code).

2. When the court postpones the pronouncement of a sentence after trial:

a) Conditional sentence: for a criminal offence punishable by imprisonment of up to three years, the court may defer imposing a sentence if there are reasonable grounds to believe that probation will serve the purpose of rehabilitation. (Article 65 (1), Criminal Code).

b) For a criminal offence punishable by imprisonment up to three years, the court may defer imposing sentence for one year, and may order work to be performed in amends if there are reasonable grounds to believe that it will serve the purpose of rehabilitation. (Article 67 (1), Criminal Code)

3. Probation with supervision (Article 69 (1), Criminal Code): may be applied if constant supervision of the perpetrator is deemed necessary a) for the duration of deferral of indictment; b) for the duration of parole; c) for the duration of probation; d) concurrently with ordering work to be performed in amends; or e) for the probation period of a suspended sentence.. Probation with supervision must be put in place in the following instances: a) where the person concerned is released on parole from life imprisonment; and b) for repeat offenders if released on parole, or sentenced to a term of imprisonment the execution of which is conditionally suspended.

Q2. Please outline the specific supervision measures as alternatives to pre-trial detention that are available in the Member State:

Under Article 130 (2) of Act XIX of 1998 on Criminal Proceedings (hereinafter Act XIX of 1998)², the court may order home curfew, house arrest and injunction to stay away, as alternatives to pre-trial detention.

- a) Home curfew restricts the free movement and free choice of residence of the person concerned. He/she may not leave the specified area or district, nor may he/she change his/her place of residence, without permission (Article 137 (1), Act XIX of 1998).
- b) A person under house arrest may only leave his/her court-designated residence and the enclosed area attached to it, within the limits specified by the court. These limits determine the time, distance, and purpose for which the person may leave, and apply particularly to everyday basic necessities or medical treatment (Article 138 (1), Act XIX of 1998).
- c) Injunction to stay away (Article 138A (1), Act XIX of 1998) requires that the person concerned:
 - leave and stay away from a residence for a specified period of time, and/or
 - stay away from a specified person (from his/her work place, educational / healthcare institution etc) (Article 138A (1), Act XIX of 1998);
 - refrain from establishing any direct or indirect contact with a specified person.

Q3. Are there any specific legislative or policy developments regarding alternatives to prison (at the pre- and post-trial stage) of particular suspects/sentenced persons (such as children, persons with disabilities, persons in need of special treatment or mothers with young children)?

1. Persons with disabilities: a) involuntary medical treatment in a mental institution: where a violent crime against the person, or a criminal offence endangering the public, has taken place, the court is required to subject the detainee to treatment in a mental institution if he/she cannot be prosecuted due to his/her mental condition, if there is reason to believe that he/she will commit a similar act, and if the crime committed would otherwise be punishable by imprisonment of one or more years (Article 78, Criminal Code). b) temporary involuntary medical treatment may be ordered for persons under pre-trial detention, if there are substantial grounds to believe that the conditions of involuntary medical treatment are met (Article 140 (2), Act XIX of 1998). Such temporary involuntary medical treatment takes place at in the Forensic Diagnostic and Mental Institution (Article 141 (2), 144 (1), Act XIX of 1998). Article 107 (1) – (3) of Act XIX of 1998 also permits the court to order mental health observation of a suspect or accused person, whose formal detention has not otherwise been ordered. This observation is determined by expert opinion, and lasts for a period of one month, in a psychiatric institution.

2. The pre-trial detention of minors may only be ordered if this is necessary due to the gravity of the criminal offence. The court decides whether such detention will take place in a) a detention home or b) a penal institution, taking into consideration the personality of the minor and the nature of the criminal offence. If the minor has not reached the age of fourteen years when he or she committed the offence, placement in a detention home is obligatory. The court may change the place of pre-trial detention at the motion of the prosecutor, the minor or the defense counsel. Minors must be separated from adults in pre-trial detention. Pre-trial detention is set at a maximum duration of two years for minors who have reached the age of 14 years at the time of committing the criminal offence. For minors who had not reached the age of 14 at the time of committing the offence, this maximum duration is one year. Exceptions can be made where the pre-trial detention was ordered or maintained after the announcement of the conclusive decision, or where a repeated procedure is in progress in the case due to repeal. (Article 454-455, Act 1998 of XIX.)

² Act XIX of 1998 on Criminal Proceedings (1998. évi XIX. törvény a büntetőjárásról), available at: njt.hu/cgi_bin/njt_doc.cgi?docid=34361.291612.

3. Mothers and young children: Act CCXL of 2013 states that punishments and penal measures, coercive measures and offence custody³ must be postponed, without request, if the sentenced person is pregnant and has already passed the 12th week of her pregnancy. This postponement is for the duration of one year following the expected date of birth, or if she is attending a child under the age of one year. An exception can be made where such a postponement would endanger public safety and security, or where there is a likelihood that the sentenced person would abscond. (Article 39 (1), (3)-(4), Act CCXL of 2013). Once a sentenced woman reaches the 12th week of her pregnancy, if the expected date of birth precedes the date of her release, she must make a statement as to whether or not she requests the interruption of the implementation of the imprisonment. (Article 116 (4), Act CCXL of 2013). Rights protecting the health of pregnant women / women attending a baby or the development of the baby can not be restricted. If the delivery of the child happens during the implementation of the custodial sentence and there is no reason to exclude joint placement (e.g. if she chooses not to keep and care for the baby, or if her parental rights have been abrogated in relation to all of her children), then both mother and child are placed together in a separate mother and child department of the Prison Service Institution of Bács-Kiskun County (Bács-Kiskun Megyei Bv. Intézet) until the child reaches the age of one. (Article 128 (1)-(5), Act CCXL of 2013; Article 22 (4), Article 23, Regulation 8/2014. (XII. 12.) of the Ministry of Justice on the health care of sentenced persons and persons detained under other grounds in prison service institutions)⁴. The mother and child department was purpose-built in 2003, and has the capacity to host 20 mothers and their babies. In 2013 the Commissioner for Fundamental Rights (Alapvető Jogok Biztosa) examined the case of a mother placed in pre-trial detention three months after the birth of her child. It found problematic that the legal framework did not provide for the joint placement of women and their children in penal institutions in cases where the child was born before the mother's custody started. The ombudsman proposed that, in the case of women caring for a baby, the authorities should, in the first instance, choose alternative measures to detention. At the same time, it initiated modification of the relevant legislative acts to allow for joint placement of mother and baby when the mother is taken into custody after the birth of the child. According to the report, while the Hungarian Prison Service Headquarters (Büntetés-végrehajtás Országos Parancsnoksága) would support the joint placement of mothers and their children in the above mentioned cases as well, the present capacity of the only existing mother and child facility would not accommodate everyone to whom joint placement apply.⁵ According to information provided by the Hungarian Prison Service Headquarters so far no new separate mother and baby department was instituted.

Q2. INFORMED CONSENT OF THE SUSPECT/SENTENCED PERSON
Q2.1. Is there a procedure in place in the issuing state (e.g. some mechanism that ensures it is done in all relevant cases) to inform the suspect/sentenced person of the option to transfer the judgment or decision to another Member State? If yes, please briefly provide information (e.g. is it an oral or written procedure) and specify who provides this information.	No specific procedure exists. Under Article 128 (1) of Act CLXXX of 2012, the certificate has to be issued by the criminal judge. Under general, applicable rules, before performing any procedural action the court shall inform and advise the person involved in the action about his/her related rights and obligations, and the person concerned has the right to receive this information (Act XIX of 1998, Article 62; Article 43 (2) f)). Defense counsels claim that the court in general fulfils this obligation in criminal procedures.²⁴ However, in practice, the role of criminal judges is only to define the content of the ministerial request for obtaining and recording the statement of the person concerned, which provides information on the procedure.²⁵	No specific procedure exists. Under Article 145 of Act CLXXX of 2012, the courts hearing the case may make a decision on transfer of alternative sanctions.
