Section A: General information on existing situation: probation measures, alternative sanctions and supervision measures as an alternative to pre-trial detention

Please add the information required to answer the questions. Provide supporting or explanatory information – highlighting laws, policies and measures which justify the answer.

Q1. Please outline the specific probation measures or alternative sanctions that are available at the post-trial stage in the Member State on which you are reporting:

Max 200 words

According to the Penal Code (Brottsbalk 1962:700), chapter 1 paragraph 3 the following measures are available at the post trial stage in Sweden apart from prison; fine, probational sentence and transfer to special care<sup>1</sup>. The Swedish law separates probation in two different concepts: “protective supervision” (skyddtillsyn) and “conditional sentence” (villkorlig dom). Conditional sentence (villkorlig dom) has a probation period of two years and can be combined with fine and/or community service<sup>2</sup>. Protective supervision (skyddtillsyn) has a probation period of three years and can be combined with prison or with the obligation to undergo treatment plan Protective supervision. (skyddtillsyn) can also be combined with fine and or community service<sup>3</sup>

If the sentenced person is sentenced to community service it is always in combination with probation either protective supervision (skyddstillsyn) or conditional sentence (villkorlig dom). Community service is unpaid work benefitting society that is carried out for certain amount of hours, determined by the court<sup>4</sup>. The alternative sanction titled transfer to special care is to be carried out if the person in question is sentenced to a sentence more severe than fine have a serious mental condition. The sentenced is then to be transferred to forensic psychiatric care<sup>5</sup>.

Q2. Please outline the specific supervision measures as alternatives to pre-trial detention that are available in the Member State:

Max 200 words

The guiding principle is that a person is to be placed in pre-trial detention if he/she on probable grounds is suspected for a crime for which the subscribed sanction is prison for at least one year, or if it is ruled that the person is at risk of fleeing the country, remove evidence or continue committing crime<sup>6</sup>. In the cases where suspected crimes are not subjected to prison but fine, pre-trial detention is not applicable<sup>7</sup>.

The alternatives to pre-trial detention if the person due to age or health-related issues is deemed not to cope with detention are travel ban and continuous duty to report<sup>8</sup>. This includes women who recently have given birth and where pre-trial detention is deemed to cause damage to the child.<sup>9</sup> Travel ban is a ban on leaving the domicile without permission and the duty to report means to report to the police authorities on certain times and on a certain location<sup>10</sup>.

Children who at the time of committing the crime where under 15 years of age is not allowed to be sentenced<sup>11</sup>.

According to chapter 32 paragraph 1 of the Penal Code can young people under the age of 21, who committed crimes, be sentenced to care of young persons if there is special need of care or other measures present<sup>12</sup> (according to the Social Service Act<sup>13</sup> or the Care of Young Persons (Special Provisions) Act<sup>14</sup>). A person under the age of 21 and who committed a crime can be sentenced to youth service if the person gives his or hers consent and the arrangements are considered appropriate<sup>15</sup>.

If the suspect/sentenced person can be in question of care for addicts the court can assign this to the social service committee. If the crime committed is imposed with prison for more than one year special reasons must be present.<sup>16</sup>

If it is determined that the suspect/sentenced person who committed a crime for which a fine is not applicable is suffering from at severe mental disturbance the court can transfer the person to forensic psychiatric care<sup>17</sup>

Special decision for mothers to have their infants with them can only be given after an opinion have been given by the social welfare committee (Socialnämnd)<sup>18</sup>.
