Justify your answer by referring to existing reports and data produced by national human rights institutions, equality bodies, Ombuds	Yes	As indicated in the recent CERD’s concluding observations on Ireland and the Fifth Report on Ireland by the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI), hate crimes laws are reported to be largely ineffective in the country.<sup>1</sup> The Prohibition of Incitement to Hatred Act (1989) narrowly deals with cases of hate speech aimed at inciting hatred and has been under review for nearly 20 years.<sup>2</sup> While, the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission (IHREC) expressed ‘the view that Ireland’s current approach to hate motivation does not adequately meet its international obligations’,<sup>3</sup> the government has expressed its confidence in soon meeting state duties under CERD and the European Framework Decision. Indeed, in October 2019, the Department of Justice and Equality (DoJE) sought responses / submissions from institutional / community stakeholders and the broader public as part of a consultative

Hate crimes against Mincéirí and Roma are underreported and underrecorded, and third party reporting mechanisms found the reason for this being a common belief by both communities that the Gardaí will do nothing about it and hate incidents happened too often.<sup>8</sup> As such, unequal access to justice is one of the main barriers for Mincéirí and Roma.

		. The lack of trust in the Gardaí stems from the racism experienced by both communities in wider society and at legal and policy level. Mincéirí and Roma communities face the risk of bias-motivated victimization, which is linked to their ethnic and nomadic status. In addition, the role of the Gardaí in evictions places them within a settled system that has discriminated and persecuted both communities in Ireland.<sup>9</sup> Another main barrier for Mincéir and Roma communities is the lack of culturally appropriate reporting mechanisms. Literacy, language and digital access are significant barriers, and the absence of support which addresses material and cultural obstacles to reporting racist incidents are critical.<sup>10</sup> In their submission to the Oireachtas Committee, Eilis Barry from the Free Legal Aid Centres stated ‘[...] we were very struck by the level and extent of unmet legal need that Travellers experience, particularly in housing, standards of accommodation, evictions and discrimination in access to good and services, including licensed premises. We believe access to justice is essential to addressing the unmet legal need and is integral and essential for social inclusion’.<sup>11</sup>

The impact of this change on official knowledge of anti-Mincéir and anti-Roma hate crime in Ireland is likely to be negligible however without accompanying supports to address under-reporting as well as under-recording'.<sup>12</sup> According to the IHREC, 'Ireland [is] falling down on obligations to tackle racial discrimination'.<sup>13</sup> As an independent body, whose mission is 'to protect and promote human rights and equality in Ireland and build a culture of respect for human rights, equality and intercultural understanding in the State', the IHREC has often acted as amicus curiae and assisted both Roma and Mincéir individuals in discrimination cases in the court system.<sup>14</sup> Most discrimination cases in Ireland are dealt with through the Workplace Relations Commission including discrimination against Roma and Mincéirí. The IHREC has supported cases before the Workplace Relations Commission.

4	Are there any barriers (legislative/policy or practical) hindering Roma and Travellers children from accessing education (e.g. neutral registration rules but difficult for Roma and Travellers to comply with, distance between home and schools, discriminatory behaviours alienating children from school environment, measures leading to school segregation)? Please indicate and explain briefly two such main barriers. Throughout 2019, a committee of the Oireachtas (Irish Parliament) heard testimonies from many Mincéirí testifying that discrimination, racism and bullying was at all levels of the education system and this was the reason for such low attainment.<sup>19</sup> Pavee Point Traveller and Roma Centre and the (Irish) Department of Justice and Equality published a joint report on the theme ‘Roma in Ireland. A National Needs Assessment’, in 2018. This indicated that only 18.4% of Roma attended education or training in Ireland.<sup>20</sup> The report also found ‘extreme poverty’ as the main barrier to education, and some parents were reported to keep their children out of school due to the fear of them being taken into care.<sup>21</sup>

The realisation of its objectives is incomplete due to discriminatory attitudes by both local authorities and the settled community: Mincéir families moving into an area often meet a hostile objection to them.<sup>27</sup> According to 'Discrimination and Inequality in Housing in Ireland', Mincéirs make up 9% of the homeless population although they make up just 1% of the overall population. Mincéirí also experience the highest levels of discrimination in access to housing.<sup>28</sup> There is no specific accommodation policy for Roma in Ireland. Extreme poverty forces Roma families to live in sub-standard and overcrowded conditions (e.g. some families live in places that have no 'kitchens or bathrooms and are damp with rats and sewerage problems').<sup>29</sup> Furthermore, difficulties in meeting 'habitual residence criteria' negatively affect Roma families' right to access social protection mechanisms.

		The National Traveller and Roma Inclusion Strategy 2017 – 2021, was developed under the EU Framework for the Implementation of National Roma integration Strategies up to 2020. It is a cross-Departmental initiative to improve the lives of the Mincéir and Roma communities in Ireland. To date the strategy has failed to address many key issues affecting Mincéir and Roma people including housing needs.<sup>30</sup> Implementation of recommendations within the strategy have been slow and in some cases local opposition to housing Mincéir or Roma families in an area puts a halt on providing Mincéir and Roma communities with adequate homes. Consequently, many Mincéir and Roma people are living in substandard conditions with little or no access to services such as water, sanitation, electricity or heat.<sup>31</sup> In 2018, the Traveller Accommodation Expert Group was established by Minister Damien English, to review the Housing (Traveller Accommodation) Act 1998 and other legislation impacting on the provision and delivery of accommodation for Travellers. The Expert Group concluded that there were significant gaps in national policy and local implantation of policy. The key issues – highlighted in this review process – concerned ‘delivery reflecting need, planning, capacity and resources, and governance’.<sup>32</sup>
