Executive summary

1. Legal and policy instruments for migrant integration

- Migrant integration policy: regulative framework between national and regional responsibilities
The document that best describes the strategy for integration in Italy is the 'Plan for a safe integration. Identity and discussion' (Piano per l'integrazione nella sicurezza. Identità e Incontro) (2010) and the Integration Agreement thereto related. Nevertheless, the lack of a homogeneous and uniform implementation strategy of policies aimed at integrating migrants and their descendants has brought about a situation where it is difficult to identify a single representative cluster of the Italian action system. According to the Italian legal framework, in fact, Regions are responsible for the integration of immigrants; therefore, most of the policies aimed at promoting the integration of migrants and their descendants and their participation in social life are implemented at regional and municipal level. We have regional policies benefitting from a considerable degree of autonomy established by the Italian legal system. The pattern of regional immigration policies turns out to be highly differentiated and fragmented – although there are some success stories; fragmentation is mainly evident in the different ways in which integration is considered, i.e. either as tied to, or independent from the foreigner's regular residency status.
- Migrant social inclusion through local projects
The dichotomy between nationally managed immigration policies and social inclusion policies managed at regional and local level generates a structural weakness of the policies targeted at migrants' social inclusion. Most of the proposals aimed at integration mainly concern local, small, and short-lived projects with little coordination among them and characterised by a general lack of awareness about what works and what does not. The proliferation of projects outlines a rich scenario of potential promising practices; however, there lacks an evaluation of their results and impacts.
- Language courses as a national integration measure for migrants
Language training is the only integration measure provided nationally through the Integration Agreement for newcomers. The hours of language training are relatively few (only 100 compared to more than 300 in other OECD countries), the level of language proficiency to be achieved is relatively low, and there is no evaluation analysis of the results and impacts of these actions.
- Lack of coordination for policies aimed at migrants' social integration
The lack of clear coordination among the national, regional and local levels, as well as of development in the integration between public actors and the third sector are the main problems in the integration system promoted in Italy. Integration programmes require aligning priorities and resources at regional and local level, and the number of actors reveals that the coverage and enforcement may be fragmented and sometimes conflicting and overlapping, or may leave gaps. In addition, projects are often small, and the activities are co-financed by several bodies, with the risk of failing to ensure a consistent approach to integration, even at local level.

- Resources specifically targeted at migrants' social inclusion
Resources devoted to integration policies are of an extraordinary nature, and are distributed throughout the territories through calls for pilot projects. This system has several critical issues related to the duration of these projects and the lack of their assessment, but especially to the cumbersome procedures which effectively limit their effective use: in 2010, out of EUR 31 million budgeted by the Regions, only 18% was granted, with a further 40% awarded to projects but never transferred.
- Citizenship as a crucial step in social inclusion processes
The rigidity that characterises the procedures for the acquisition of citizenship actually represents a hindrance to the processes of migrants' social inclusion that has strongly penalised the second generation.

2. Promoting equal treatment and non-discrimination

- Limits and potentiality in the implementation of anti-discrimination legislation and equal treatment. Despite the existence of a legislative framework against discrimination, this is hardly applied: resorting to court proceedings is rare, as are sanctions. The National Office against Racial Discriminations (Ufficio Nazionale Antidiscriminazioni Razziali, UNAR) collects and follows up on discrimination cases, but it is not yet very well-known among migrants, and cannot represent plaintiffs in court. Nevertheless from 2012 to 2013, complaints lodged with UNAR, concerning all grounds of discrimination, grew by 20%. Looking at the initiatives aimed at eliminating any discrimination, and at promoting an inclusion policy, Italy shows some shortcomings at to analyses, surveys, and polls on migrants' and their descendants' awareness about the right to equal treatment. Data referring to the percentage of complaints in Italy are collected by the UNAR Contact Centre (toll-free number) and at the online access point The Contact Centre collects complaints, denunciations, and evidence on facts, events, situations, procedures, and actions undermining the equal treatment of people on the grounds of racial or ethnic origin. It offers immediate assistance to victims of discrimination, providing them with information, orientation, and psychological support. Moreover, the Contact Centre assists the victims in court, if they decide to take legal action aimed at assessing and punishing the offending conduct.
- Implementation of equal treatment of various permit holders
The national regulatory framework does not provide for any protection on the grounds of nationality. Foreigners from non-EU/EFTA countries are allowed into our country on a temporary basis, and in the majority of cases the renewal of the permit is linked to being in employment. Nevertheless, for long-term residence, the lack of income cannot justify the revocation of EU residence permits for long-term residents. For Blue Card holders, a recent Italian regulation has eliminated the consistency requirement between educational qualifications and professional qualifications for highly skilled workers. As to residence permits for family reunification, in Italy the main problems are due to administrative delays in the release of permits. Procedures for long-term residence status holders feature local differences.
- Key developments and trends in promoting equal treatment and non-discrimination

At national level, the main developments concern the implementation of the equality and non-discrimination principle. In particular, in 2013 UNAR was tasked with elaborating, defining, and operating an Action Plan against Racism, Xenophobia, and Intolerance to be implemented in the 2013–2015 period, which at the moment has still to be finalised. In order to promote social integration, and combat discrimination of any type, the Department for Equal Opportunities of the Presidency of the Council of Ministers, in cooperation with the National Lawyers' Council (Consiglio Nazionale Forense) and UNAR (which belongs to the same department), created the Solidarity Fund for the Legal Protection of Victims of Discrimination. In 2013, Italy introduced an important element concerning foreigners' access to jobs within public administrations. Moreover, in order to speed up the whole application procedure to obtain the Italian citizenship, thus simplifying the data entry step, since 18 May 2015 it has been possible to submit applications online through a new system.

3. Participation of migrants and their descendants in society

- Political rights at national level

The Italian citizenship can be acquired in one of the following ways:

- automatic acquisition: citizenship as a result of Italian parents/ancestors (iure sanguinis); citizenship granted to people born on Italian soil (iure soli); citizenship through judiciary ruling on natural paternity/maternity; citizenship by adoption;
- acquisition by claim: foreign descendants of Italians up to the second degree, or born in Italy; citizenship by marriage with an Italian citizen;
- naturalisation.

The main challenges that have triggered important debates in Italy concern the matter of the acquisition of citizenship. There are 16 bills to reform the citizenship law. Among the main innovations under discussion there is the extension of cases of acquisition of citizenship by birth (ius soli) and an easier access to citizenship for minors who have completed their studies in Italy. In the meantime, Decree Law No. 69 of 21 June 2013, Urgent provisions to relaunch the economy (Decreto legge 21 giugno 2013, n. 69, Disposizioni urgenti per il rilancio dell'economia) has simplified procedures for the acquisition of citizenship for foreigners born in Italy.

- Voting rights in national elections (turnout)

In Italy the right to vote at national level is not granted to third-country nationals (TCNs). In the 2013 national elections, nine elected representatives were not born in Italy out of 945, the total number of members of Parliament. Foreigners do not enjoy the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in local elections. The right to vote is subordinated to the acquisition of nationality (Article 48 of the Italian Constitution) and the extension of voting rights would thus require a constitutional reform. Nevertheless, the recognition of the right to vote for non-EU foreigners in local elections has been, particularly in recent years, the subject of a number of interventions by regional and local authorities. The project 'I PARTICIPATE' aims to enhance and support the integration process of TCNs by promoting their participation in the democratic process at local level and by fostering their active citizenship.

At regional level, the number of elected representatives with migrant background is 9 out of a total of 1,195 (0.7%). The number of elected representatives with migrant background at provincial level is 26 out of a total of 1,697 (1.5%). The number of elected representatives with migrant background at municipal level is 2,395 out of a total of 127,167 (1.9%). Analysis showed that mayors with migrant background (i.e. whose country of birth is different from Italy) are 111 out of a total of 7,844 (1.4%).

In the public debate on immigration, usually reduced to emergency readings, the challenges of political participation have remained in the background.

- Consultation

The main participatory bodies for foreign citizens in Italy are: Councils, Deputy Councillors, Territorial Councils for Immigration, and the associations of foreign nationals provided for in Legislative Decree No. 286 of 25 July 1998, Consolidated text of provisions governing immigration and the status of aliens (Decreto legislativo 25 luglio 1998, n. 25, Testo unico delle disposizioni concernenti la disciplina dell'immigrazione e norme sulla condizione dello straniero (so-called 'Consolidated Text on Immigration'). Poor representation characterises all advisory bodies in question. This is due to several reasons including the fact that most of the aforementioned advisory bodies host a small, or not clearly defined, component of foreign representatives. All the advisory bodies in question can exercise their duties solely in relation to areas concerned with the migration phenomenon. The literature on this topic shows that, after a start-up and trial phase full of enthusiasm, the institutional participation of foreigners in Italy has often experienced uncertainty, with too great a set of expectations and the emergence of some criticalities. For instance, in the framework of the practices implemented in Emilia-Romagna, which have been frequently analysed in literature, an overall decrease in voter turnout has been observed over the years throughout the Region. One of the possible reasons is a lower investment in information dissemination compared to the first elections, as well as decreasing trust in the advisory body. Councils lack any guarantee of effective functioning. In most cases, the regional legislation in question does not provide for either specific allocations of financial and instrumental resources for these organs, or the payment of any compensation to their members.

- Participation in trade-unions and professional associations

The literature shows no limits or barriers with respect to the adhesion of migrant workers to unions and trade associations. Nevertheless, the analysis of the main national unions, through their websites, does not reveal any campaigns or actions aimed at supporting membership and participation of migrant workers. Immigrants who adhered to the Italian General Confederation of Work (Confederazione Generale Italiana del Lavoro, CGIL), one of the main Italian trade unions, represent over 9% of the total number of members. The Romanians are the largest community, but in relation to the number of residents in Italy, they are under-represented in unions. More interested and participatory, on the other hand, are the Africans and workers from the Balkan countries. The construction and industry sectors are almost exclusively covered by the male component, while in the services sector the weight of women usually appears predominant.

According to the regulatory framework, the foreigners who are legally residing in Italy and hold a degree recognised in the country have, within one year from the implementation of Law No. 40 of 6 March 1998, Provisions governing immigrations and the status of aliens (Legge 6 marzo 1998, n. 40, Disciplina dell'immigrazione e norme sulla condizione dello straniero), the opportunity to enroll in professional associations or organisations or, in the case of professions without any register, in special lists to be set up by the relevant ministries, in spite of the provisions that require the Italian citizenship. Admission to the registers is considered a necessary condition for the exercise of professions, even in the case of waged employment. After the expiry of the deadline, the possibility of new registrations for foreigners who wish to carry out professional activities in Italy will be determined annually by the quota system defined in the migrant flow decrees, as well as on the basis of the definition of maximum employment percentages.

The procedure to obtain recognition in Italy of qualifications obtained abroad is very complex, and can involve different bodies depending on the type of degree and the purposes for which recognition is sought. For instance, in the medical and healthcare sector, managed by the Ministry of Health, the procedure is slightly easier thanks to the large number of applications for the recognition of nursing qualifications, caused by a growing demand in the labour market. Moreover, there are other professions whose registers and associations are supervised by the Ministry of Justice, such as accountants, stockbrokers, agronomists, lawyers, and engineers. In this case, foreigners must submit the application directly to the Ministry which verifies a number of parameters (enrolment in any register, exercise of the profession in the country of origin, etc.). For the purposes of professional recognition and the subsequent issue of a licence, candidates are also subject to competence assessment: foreigners must thus start studying again certain subjects, and then pass some examinations. This applies to all the countries of origin with which there are no specific agreements in force. Data concerning migrants in professional associations are in most cases not available. The Physicians and Dentists' Association is an exception: 3.9% of members have a migrant background.

- Participation in social, cultural, and public life

The norms regulating the membership of migrants in professional sports associations are generally very complex, and depend on the migrants' nationality of origin. The analysis is focused on football and volleyball regulations, showing that the regulation of the Italian Volleyball Federation (Federazione Italiana Pallavolo, FIPAV) discriminates against foreign athletes at several levels, starting from their enrolment, the primary and fundamental condition for being allowed to play.

There are no studies on media, sports, and culture professional associations concerning the action to encourage and support membership and participation of TCNs. When accessing professional associations related to the media, sports, and culture, foreigners face several legal barriers, and the presence of migrants elected as representatives of such associations is not promoted. Nevertheless, the number of migrants and their descendants as media professionals has increased in the last decade: in 2003 the Information Agency for Associated Immigrants (Agenzia Informazione Immigrati Associati, Migra) was created with the aim of giving voice to the stakeholders, starting from their point of view, and promoting close cooperation between journalists and Italian immigrants in order to foster a correct representation of foreign communities in the media. In 2010 the National Association of Intercultural Press (Associazione Nazionale Stampa Interculturale, ANSI) was born and officially recognised as a 'specialised group' within the National Federation of the Italian Press (Federazione Nazionale Stampa Italiana, FNSI). Alongside traditional mass media, in recent years the so-called 'multicultural media' have made their way into our homes: they are enterprises made up by immigrants, often joined by volunteers from anti-discrimination associations, or by second generations. In Italy the first multicultural media pilot project was kicked off during the first half of the 1980s: it is 'Radio Shabi', a radio programme in Arabic language with music from Maghreb countries, broadcasted on Friday nights on Radio Popolare, a Milan-based radio broadcaster.

In Italy, the participation and public visibility of migrants and their descendants is particularly high during the events concerning the presentation of awareness-raising campaigns against discrimination, such as the one proposed by the Italian Footballers' Association (Associazione Italiana Calciatori, AIC) which cooperates with UNAR against racism. Another way in which they are present at national level is mainly through the so-called 'second generation youth', active on the web through second generation networks, such as the 'G2 Network - Second Generations' (Rete G2 - Seconde Generazioni), a national non-partisan organisation founded by the children of immigrants and refugees born and/or raised in Italy.

- Diversity in the public sector

Law No. 97 of 6 August 2013, Provisions to comply with obligations descending from Italy's membership to the European Union - 2013 European Law (Legge 6 agosto 2013, n. 97, Disposizioni per l'adempimento degli obblighi derivanti dall'appartenenza dell'Italia all'Unione europea - Legge europea 2013) amended Article 38 of Legislative Decree No. 165 of 30 March 2001, General provisions on the employment system of public service (Decreto legislativo 30 marzo 2001, n. 165, Norme generali sull'ordinamento del lavoro alle dipendenze delle amministrazioni pubbliche) and extended access to employment in public administration offices that do not involve direct or indirect exercise of public powers, i.e. they do not pertain to the preservation of national interests. Access is therefore allowed to citizens of EU Member States and their family members who are not citizens of a Member State but have the right to residency or the right to permanent residency, as well as to TCNs who hold an EU residency permit for long-term residents or hold the refugee status or the subsidiary protection status.

The Italian literature does not highlight any specific limitations in public sector recruitment inherent to the ethnic background of immigrants. However, in the national notices for selection procedures there are often provisions that limit participation to Italian citizens only.

- Political activity - active citizenship

There are no legal or practical limitations or barriers for migrants' self-organisation and for their membership in civil society organisations. According to the mapping carried out in Italy between February and June 2014 by the study and research centre IDOS, there are 2,114 active migrant associations.

In the Italian framework, the regulatory system precludes TCNs from enjoying any form of direct representation. Immigrants appear to be included only in the most marginal, least protected, and lowest-paid contexts and social and working conditions. Unions probably remain the only structures within which foreigners can also be represented and represent, decide, and vote directly, both through the election of union delegates or by having the opportunity to apply in person for certain positions (delegate, officer, secretary, etc.) within different structures. The absence of a clear policy and precise regulations regarding the forms of political representation for immigrants has let some Municipalities to kick off pilot projects with the involvement of the foreign population, with a very broad range of shades. A recent study shows that the estimates provided by respondents about the number of migrants registered in four main Italian partisan alliances – Democratic Party (Partito Democratico, PD), The People of Freedom (Il Popolo della Libertà, PdL), Left Ecology Freedom (Sinistra Ecologia Libertà, SEL), and the Communist Refoundation Party (Partito della Rifondazione Comunista, PRC) – outline a phenomenon limited to a few hundreds of experiences, involving the most active territories and major cities.

- Civic and citizenship education

Gender issues are present in all societal aspects. Education plays a crucial role in perpetuating or contrasting gender stereotypes. Women are about 78.5% of all teachers in Italian schools. The Ministry of Education, University, and Research supported a campaign on gender equality in 2013–2014 aiming at increasing knowledge and awareness about gender violence and gender stereotypes.

Concerning participation of parents of migrant background, even though the regulatory framework intends to promote the participation of parents with a migrant background in school life, there is only some evidence at local level. The following projects are considered promising practices: 'Moving families, a new identity in an intercultural society' (Rome), Italian language and active citizenship courses for adults and children (Prato), and 'The culture of others' (La cultura degli altri) (Rome).

As of the 2010–2011 school year, a specific ministerial circular is in force that gradually, from the first year of each level of studies, provides for the distribution of pupils without Italian citizenship among the schools and classes established within each school so as not to exceed the limit of 30% for the number of foreign students in each class. Furthermore, the incentive measures for projects related to at-risk areas concerned by a strong migration phenomenon and against school marginalisation have been defined. Moreover, school curricula and teaching materials can be modified to reflect the diversity of the school population.

Teaching on citizenship and the Italian Constitution, provided for by Law No. 169 of 30 October 2008, Conversion into law, with modifications, of Decree Law No. 137 of 1 September 2008, containing urgent provisions on education and university (Legge 30 ottobre 2008, n. 169, Conversione in legge, con modificazioni, del Decreto Legge 1° settembre 2008, n. 137, recante disposizioni urgenti in materia di istruzione e università) for all schools of all types and at all levels, is fully implemented through Ministerial Circular No. 86 of 27 October 2010 (Circolare ministeriale n. 86 del 27 ottobre 2010), also in response to the results gathered from the monitoring of a national pilot project, which began in the school year 2009–2010 with the active participation of several schools nationwide. The intended purpose is the creation “in young generations of a civic-social and citizenship culture which connects its local and regional dimension to broader horizons at the national, European, and international levels, resulting in a conscious undertaking of the values enshrined in the Constitutional Charter, which inspire attitudes, behaviours, and daily practices”. The education on citizenship and the rights/duties of active citizenship thus provides for several thematic groups, which also include safety in the school community and in civil society, and the ethics of individual and social responsibility.

- Drivers, barriers for the implementation, monitoring, and assessment of legislation and policy measures

The Italian authorities took steps to enhance the role of UNAR, in particular: by formally extending its powers so that the relevant legislation clearly covers discrimination based not only on ethnic origin and race but also on colour, language, religion, nationality, and national origin; by conferring on it the right to bring legal proceedings; and by ensuring that its full independence is secured both in law and in fact. Moreover, the autonomy of schools at local level increases the possibility to develop tailored actions to promote migrants’ integration. An analysis of the Italian literature pertaining to the integration of migrants and their descendants outlines a double difficulty in monitoring and evaluating the implementation of legislation and policy measures. The first difficulty is found at national level with the following problems:

- the absence of a strong steering body able to outline a specific and targeted strategy;
- the lack of clear legislation aimed at tackling the main problems that characterise immigration in Italy, such as the issues of citizenship, residency permits, and work integration, the main instruments which represent in this context the key to introducing a whole range of rights and duties.

The second difficulty is to be found at regional/local level, which in this area of intervention shows a fragmented situation where the lack of uniformity of tools and integration policies is the main feature. On the one hand, there are Regions that have consolidated successful inclusive policies over time; on the other hand, there are some other Regions that only in recent years have been active in this regard. To complete the general picture, there is UNAR, the body responsible for guaranteeing rights and for fighting against discrimination. This body, in spite of the good results achieved over the years, does not yet enjoy special autonomy, and this highlights the limits of its action, reflecting a lack of maturity in the implementation of anti-discrimination legislation.

Public funding for social care in Italy has been declining significantly further to the provisions adopted by the Government over the last two years, with a strong impact on expenditure items destined to immigrants and integration policies. The scarcity of resources is likely to be an obstacle to the concrete guarantee of citizenship rights for all, and to the promotion of social integration for foreigners. For inclusion policies, there are three different public sources of funding: local funds (i.e. those in the municipal and regional budgets), national funds (decided at central level), and European funds (awarded by the European Commission).

4. Social cohesion and community relations

- Social cohesion policies

In Italy, the concept of social cohesion is represented by integration, and at national level there is no well-defined legal, political, and social framework targeted at migrants and their descendants. Programming in this field currently consists of the 'Plan for a safe integration. Identity and discussion' launched in 2010 (Ministry of Labour and Social Policies, Directorate General for Immigration) and of the more recent Integration Agreement prepared along the lines of the 'European forms'. Specific measures to strengthen social cohesion are enforced at local level. The website 'Integrazione migranti. Vivere e lavorare in Italia' (Migrants' integration. Living and working in Italy) of the Ministries of Labour and Social Policies, and of Education, University, and Research hosts a selection of a range of specific measures to support integration, regarding:

- school (practices to be shared for foreign minors' school integration);
- job and training (practices to be shared for foreign citizens' socio-occupational integration);
- equal opportunities (practices to be shared for women's socio-cultural integration);
- other practices (practices to be shared for foreign citizens' language and social integration).

The main indicators to assess, monitor, and support social cohesion policies are collected and analysed by the National Economic and Labour Council (Consiglio Nazionale dell'Economia e del Lavoro, CNEL), and presented in the Ninth CNEL 2013 Report on the Indices of Migrant Integration in Italy. The report was prepared by the National Coordination Body for Social Integration Policies for Foreign Citizens (Organismo Nazionale di Coordinamento per le politiche di integrazione sociale dei cittadini stranieri, O.N.C.) of CNEL, in cooperation with the Ministry of Labour and Social Policies, Directorate General for Immigration and Integration Policies. The report presents the annual data related to immigrants' level of social and occupational integration on a national and local basis, as well as the degree of attractiveness that Provinces, Regions, and large national areas have on the foreign population in Italy.

In Italy, the main body responsible for promoting and implementing prevention and monitoring actions to combat discrimination is UNAR. Among the initiatives promoted by UNAR, we mention a specific campaign against racism entitled 'Accendi la mente. Spegni i pregiudizi. 16-22 marzo 2015' (Turn your mind on. Switch prejudice off. 16-22 March 2015), which includes several actions within schools, Municipalities, and associations.

- Combatting racism and intolerance

Specific measures to strengthen social cohesion are enforced at local level. The 'Plan for a safe integration. Identity and discussion' (2010) does not explicitly address combatting racism, xenophobia, and intolerance. Guidelines and rules concerning the language used by the media or journalists when writing about migrants and/or their descendants have been elaborated in the document entitled 'Guidelines for the implementation of the Rome Charter. Working tools for correct information on immigration and asylum issues' (Linee guida per l'applicazione della Carta di Roma. Strumenti di lavoro per un'informazione corretta sui temi dell'immigrazione e dell'asilo).

- Mixed marriages

In order to get married in Italy to a foreign citizen, it is not necessary to have a residence permit but simply a valid ID document (e.g. passport). A share of 13.4% of the total number of marriages had at least a foreign spouse in 2013. In mixed couples, the most widespread type is the one with an Italian bridegroom and a foreign bride; this type of marriages represents 7.4% of the total average of marriages at national level and about 10% in northern Regions. Italian women who have chosen a foreign spouse were 2.0% of the total number of brides. Italian men who in 2013 got married to a foreign citizen, have a Romanian wife in 19.2% of cases, an Ukrainian wife in 11.0% of cases, and a Brazilian wife in 6.2% of cases. All in all, one out of two foreign brides is a citizen of an eastern European country. Italian women who have got married to a foreign citizen, instead, have most often chosen men from Morocco (13.7%), Albania (9.2%), and Tunisia (6.3%). Altogether, as to this type of marriages, almost three out of ten foreign bridegrooms are citizens of an African country.

1. Legal and policy instruments for migrant integration

1.1. Description of existing instruments and target groups

This section should present the overall state of play concerning national and, where applicable, regional legal and policy instruments focusing on how they address fundamental rights, core EU values and principles, as well as international legal standards and related EU law and policies, such as the Common Basic Principles and the Common Agenda on integration of migrants. Please complete the template in Annex 2. Please make sure the brief information you provide in the table includes the following aspects:

Does the national strategy on migrant integration contain a definition of integration? If so, please include it in the original language and full English translation.

The document that best describes the strategy for integration in Italy is the 'Plan for a safe integration. Identity and discussion' (Piano per l'integrazione nella sicurezza. Identità e Incontro) (2010) and the Integration Agreement thereto related (Joint Circular of the Minister of the Interior and of the Minister for International Cooperation and Integration of 2 March 2012, Guidelines for the implementation of Decree of the President of the Republic No. 179 of 14 September 2011 – Programme Agreement, Circolare congiunta Ministro dell'Interno e Ministro per la Cooperazione internazionale e l'integrazione del 2 marzo 2012, Linee d'indirizzo per l'applicazione del decreto del Presidente della Repubblica 14 settembre 2011, n. 179 – Accordo di integrazione). The Integration Agreement contains the following definition of integration:

'L'integrazione, intesa come processo finalizzato a promuovere la convivenza dei cittadini italiani e di quelli stranieri legalmente soggiornanti nel territorio nazionale, nel rispetto dei valori sanciti dalla Costituzione italiana, si fonda sul reciproco impegno a partecipare alla vita economica, sociale e culturale della società.

In particolare, per i cittadini stranieri integrarsi in Italia presuppone l'apprendimento della lingua italiana e richiede il rispetto, l'adesione e la promozione dei valori democratici di libertà, di eguaglianza e di solidarietà democrazia posti a fondamento della Repubblica italiana.

A questi obiettivi mira l'accordo di integrazione che, ai sensi dell'articolo 4-bis del testo unico delle disposizioni concernenti l'immigrazione, lo straniero è tenuto a sottoscrivere contestualmente alla presentazione della domanda di rilascio del permesso di soggiorno, quale condizione necessaria per ottenere il permesso medesimo'.

Translation:

'Integration, meaning a process designed to promote the coexistence of Italian citizens and foreign nationals legally residing in the country, is based on mutual commitment to participating in the economic, social,

		and cultural life, respecting the values enshrined in the Italian Constitution. In particular, in order to be integrated, foreign nationals are required to learn the Italian language, and respect, share, and promote the democratic values of freedom, equality, and solidarity that are at the basis of the Italian Republic. Pursuant to Article 4a of the Consolidated Law containing provisions on immigration and the foreigner status, Legislative Decree No. 286 of 25 July 1998, so-called 'Consolidated Law on Immigration' (Testo unico delle disposizioni concernenti la disciplina dell'immigrazione e norme sulla condizione dello straniero, Decreto legislativo 25 luglio 1998, n. 286), while submitting the required application for the residence permit, foreign nationals shall sign an integration agreement, the objectives of which are set above.<sup>3</sup>
	Are there specific references in the national strategy or relevant legal or policy instruments to fundamental rights in relation to migrants?	In the 'Plan for a safe integration. Identity and discussion' (2010), fundamental rights are not explicitly mentioned, nevertheless the word 'right' is strongly related to duties. In the Integration Agreement for migrants' integration, there is a general reference to fundamental rights in relation to the State's obligation: Article 2 – The State's obligations The State: a) ensures the enjoyment of fundamental rights and equal social status of people regardless of gender, race, language, religion, political orientation, and personal and social status, preventing any form of racism and discrimination.<sup>4</sup>
	Which are the target groups of the national integration strategy? Please provide any definitions relevant or the determination of the persons that are entitled to or beneficiaries of the relevant action plans and policy measures (e.g. 'integration agreements': who signs them and what do they contain). Please specify any residence requirements (e.g. which migrant and/or residence status counts or not for "legally residing third country nationals" that eventually would be covered by these policies) for persons to be	The 'Plan for a safe integration. Identity and discussion' (2010) of the Ministries of Labour and Social Policies, of the Interior, and of Education, University, and Research states that 'the main specific feature of the Italian model is the fact of being based on an educational dimension. Italians and immigrants can realistically meet with each other only if their education is centred on openness to others as an absolute value. This task needs a commitment from bodies that are traditionally responsible for education (family, school, associations), where even the compliance with rules is perceived in a non-formal way, as a concrete expression of common good'. Therefore, it is theoretically, targeted at Italians and immigrants. Nevertheless, it claims that actions should be taken at local level, according to a subsidiary policy approach.<sup>5</sup> In the Integration Agreement, instead, the target group is defined as follows: 'The Integration Agreement is targeted at foreigners aged over 16 who enter Italy for the first time, and submit an application for a residence

With regard to teachers as a specific target group, the 'Guidelines for the welcome and the integration of foreign pupils'<sup>9</sup> (Linee guida per l'accoglienza e l'integrazione degli alunni stranieri) (2014) state that according to Ministerial Decree No. 249 of 10 September 2010 (Decreto ministeriale 10 settembre 2010, n. 249), the master course for teachers in primary school envisages that 'teachers should have relational and management skills so as to make in-class teaching fruitful for all pupils, thus fostering the coexistence of different cultures and religions'. Moreover, this decree states that teachers' educational profile shall include knowledge of intercultural pedagogy. However, due to decision-making autonomy relating to organisation and curricula, only some Italian universities organise compulsory examinations on the topic. Nevertheless, in the same decree, the initial training related to secondary-school teaching programmes lacks specific reference to intercultural education. It is therefore deemed necessary that trainees' training includes, among its objectives, the acquisition of intercultural skills. Finally, these are just very generic guidelines which however lack adequately funded policy interventions.<sup>10</sup> One of the promising practices is 'In.Media.Res – Integration Mediation Responsibility in Piedmont' (In.Media.Res – Integrazione Mediazione Responsabilità in Piemonte)<sup>11</sup>. The main objective of this project is to overcome difficulties related to school integration and inclusion, experienced by third-country national (TCN) minors who are relatively new in the country or who need support in their educational and identity-building process. The project relates to the school year 2013–2014, and is implemented throughout the territory of the Province of Turin (and specifically in some districts of the regional capital as to direct support measures to newcomers). The beneficiaries of this project are TCN minors (6–18 years) who are relatively new in the country or who encounter specific difficulties in the integration in educational and/or vocational training paths. The project target groups have been identified on the basis of specific needs, having a fair gender balance in mind. The selection procedure was not based on nationality, but due to the emergency situation concerning integration and inclusion, that affects mostly Egyptian, Chinese, and Serbian and Bosnian Roma minors, specific attention has been paid to minors of these nationalities. The intervention is not limited to the presence of a cultural mediator in the classroom, but

1.2. Drivers &amp; barriers in developing, implementing and assessing legal and policy instruments
	On the basis of material collected, including past research, studies, assessments, evaluation and contacts with the authorities, public officials and key actors for social inclusion and participation of migrants, outline the main drivers and barriers for social inclusion and integration policies in general. Please mention also any important differences at regional level. A more detailed outline of specific drivers and barriers for specific policy areas will be required in the following sections.	1) Relevant increase in migration flows Over the last 15 years, Italy showed an unprecedented growth in migration flows, compared to the other OECD countries. The immigrant population, who over this period has grown more than fourfold, reaching about 4.5 million, represented 10% of the working age population in 2011–2012. 2) Features of the Italian labour market and the role of the black market The main feature is the incidence of the undeclared and irregular labour market, which, according to some estimates, makes up 10% of the economy. Such phenomenon is partly due to irregular immigration; moreover, periodic regularisations are a historical characteristic of Italian integration policies. 3) Weakness in the regulatory framework The permit system makes it possible that about half of non-EU immigrants obtain a prolonged, though wholly precarious temporary permit, while the other half have to go through long and uncertain procedures to obtain naturalisation. 4) Huge regional differences Huge inequalities in economic, social, and institutional conditions at regional level hamper the integration of immigrants into native communities, and favour internal mobility. 5) Features of migration flows and the economic crisis This massive immigration phenomenon of people with low educational levels occurred in a context characterised by weak growth, and since 2008 by a prolonged economic downturn and increasing unemployment rates for both the natives and immigrants. Immigrants' employment is concentrated in

		few sectors, some of which have been strongly affected by the crisis, such as the manufacturing industry and the construction sector, which are not expected to recover quickly. Moreover, the Italian labour market is undergoing a series of reforms targeting both immigrants and natives. The overall employment rate is low in Italy. However, immigrants' employment rates are slightly higher than natives'. These data are quite unique among OECD countries, and raise questions about the feasibility of the measures targeted at immigrants in a situation where natives, too, face many difficulties in entering the labour market. 6) Governance model A further feature of Italy is the division of responsibilities related to the development and adoption of policies, among national, regional, provincial, and local authorities, as well as the dependence upon tertiary-sector actors, such as service providers. Even when political orientations are clear, institutional constraints, procedures, and bureaucracy contribute to curbing the capacity for action/implementation. For this reason, it is not easy to steer or identify a single national policy, or draw conclusions about national policy.<sup>19</sup> 7) Since 2000, the National Economic and Labour Council (Consiglio Nazionale dell'Economia e del Lavoro, CNEL) has been publishing an annual report on the social integration index of foreigners in Italy, aimed at measuring the level of attractiveness concerning Regions, Provinces, and national areas, and at evaluating immigrants' social and labour inclusion in this context and at national level<sup>20</sup>. Nevertheless, neither a systematic monitoring system of the National Action Plan (NAP), nor any assessment or review at national level has been implemented so far. Regional observatories are responsible for regional analysis and evaluation of regional and local policy.
1.2.1. Drivers
	The key drivers for successful integration policies, therefore factors that are considered to contribute positively in the design, development, implementation, assessment and accomplishment of policy goals and in strengthening social inclusion and participation of migrants and their descendants. For example, are these policies	The Italian literature does not outline specific initiatives at national level; however, the key factors for successful integration policies emerge mainly at regional level, with a host of initiatives that meet the needs of the territories where they are implemented. We focus our attention on some regional policy experiences showing several drivers for successful integration: 1) mainstreaming integration policy into other public policies: the Region of Emilia-Romagna tackles the issue of migration integration through a cross-cutting approach,

<sup>19</sup> OECD (2014), "Lavoro per gli immigrati: L'integrazione nel mercato del lavoro in Italia", available at <http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/9789264216570-it>

Cf. the programming document 'For an intercultural community. The 2014–2016 three-year programme for foreign citizens' social integration. These interventions are aimed at intercultural promotion (intercultural communication, intercultural centres, intercultural training for professionals, promotion of languages of origin), as well as at the promotion of migrants' associations and participation in public life; these interventions are also addressed to specific targets (asylum-seekers and refugees, victims of human trafficking, unaccompanied minors, women experiencing social isolation);<sup>22</sup> 2) focus on foreign citizens in public life: the Region of Tuscany promotes the Plan for the Integrated Coordination of Immigration Policies 2012–2015 (Piano di indirizzo integrato per le politiche sull'immigrazione 2012-2015). Among its priorities, item 1.5.1 concerns foreign citizens' representation and participation in public life.<sup>2324</sup> Concrete examples of how this priority is implemented are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- promotion of legislative initiatives at national level, aimed at extending the right to vote to non-European citizens, and promotion of EU citizens' effective exercise of the right to vote;</li> </ul>

1.2.2.Barriers
	Barriers, limitations, constraints or resistance faced in designing, developing and implementing such policies and measures, therefore factors that may hinder their effectiveness and influence negatively their outcomes. For example, budgetary limitations, or problems of coordination of governance levels, priority of interventions, lack of training or lack of mainstreaming of relevant policies, lack of action by competent actors or limited data about the interested population, could be factors that may function as obstacles or affect negatively the implementation of selected migrant integration measures.	1) National and regional policy level The lack of a homogeneous and uniform implementation strategy of policies aimed at integrating migrants and their descendants, has brought about a situation where it is difficult to identify a single cluster being representative of the Italian action system. There emerge two levels that create two different types of barriers and hurdles, which originate from the fact of dealing with different immigration policies. In that sense, we can consider two types of development: on the one hand, we have national policies mainly centred on labour-based integration (regulations concerning entrance/residence and asylum permits) or public security policies, such as the creation of the Central Directorate for Immigration and Border Police, detached from the Central Directorate of Traffic, Railway, Border, and Immigration Police. All of this is aimed at pursuing a twofold objective: favouring the development of innovative and more effective action strategies, also with greater international reach, to fight against irregular immigration; and tackling problems related to the presence of foreigners on the national territory<sup>25</sup>. On the other hand, we have regional policies benefitting from a considerable degree of autonomy set forth in the Italian law system. The pattern of regional immigration policies turns out to be highly fragmented – although there are some success stories; fragmentation is evident above all in the different way of considering integration either as linked to, or independent from the foreigner's regular residence status.<sup>26</sup> The legislator has appointed the Ministry of Labour and Social Policies<sup>27</sup> with institutional competences as regards immigration and integration, as follows: - to coordinate immigrant foreign citizens' integration policies and to supervise the non-EU foreign workers' entrance flows (art.45, paragraph 3, of Lgs.D. n.300/1999; art. 1, paragraph 4, of L.D. n. 85/2008,

More in detail, the Ministry of Labour and Social Policies deals with the migratory phenomenon both with reference to issues concerning immigration for job reasons and foreign citizens' integration policies. In the first case, in particular, the Ministry's tasks are as follows: - to participate in the annual planning of the entrance flows for job reasons, in collaboration with the other administrations involved; and, by means of a computerised system, to take care of dividing the territory and monitoring the shares; - to manage and supervise the entrance shares of foreign workers and to supervise the labour market with reference to flows concerning foreign workers; - to supervise international cooperation and the signing of bilateral agreements with the countries of origin with the aim to regulate entrance flows for job reasons; - to promote and supervise initiatives concerning active policies as well as the involvement of the cognizant services in the activities of the foreign citizens' job insertion and re-insertion. In the second case, the Ministry promotes initiatives in order to favour the migrants' social integration processes, in collaboration with Regions and local Bodies. In particular, the Ministry's tasks in this ambit are as follows: - to coordinate policies for immigrant foreign citizens' social and labour integration, and to promote initiatives aimed at preventing and contrasting discrimination, xenophobia and the phenomenon of racism; - to manage financial resources for migratory policies; - to supervise the registering of associations and bodies that carry out activities for immigrants (art. 42 of the Single Text on Immigration - Lgs.D. n.286 of 25 July 1998) - to coordinate activities concerning policies for the protection of unaccompanied foreign minors not applicants for asylum, to supervise the residence modalities of unaccompanied foreign minors present on the territory of the Italian State and of foreign minors received temporarily; - to supervise the development of international cooperation within the ambit of prevention activities and studies on social and labour emergencies, and to encourage relationships with international organisms for the subjects of competence. 2) Regional policy: fragmentation and heterogeneity The Italian legal framework (Constitutional Law No. 3 of 18 October 2001, Modifications to Title V, Part II of the Constitution - Legge costituzionale 18 ottobre 2001, n. 3, Modifiche al titolo V della parte seconda della Costituzione) sets out that Regions are responsible for the integration of immigrants; therefore, most of policies aimed at promoting migrants' and their

		descendants' inclusion and participation in social life are implemented at regional and municipal level. This implies not only a highly heterogeneous regional policy, but also the fragmentation of actions at local level. The literature on the subject outlines new legal measures which however do not yet provide a complete and clear national picture of what is happening throughout the country, but are most widely implemented at local level, albeit with strong regional differences. 3) Budgetary limitations strongly affect the implementation of specific projects in schools and at local level. 4) The lack of mainstreaming of relevant policies affects the development, implementation, and assessment of legal and policy instruments.

	Please provide information about: Main language learning support programmes and courses. Provide details about organisation of such programmes and actors implementing them, funding support, location, duration, frequency, numbers of beneficiaries, entitlements and limitations for accessing courses.	Since March 2012, newcomers aged over 16 (though with some notable exceptions) holding a residence permit in Italy for more than one year, must sign an agreement with the State (Integration Agreement). The new framework is based on a point system in which learning the Italian language is the main tool to attain the required point score within two years. Italy devolved one third of the European Investment Fund (EIF) to support the covenant concluded in the framework of the Integration Agreement. Before 2011, the number of students attending EIF-funded language courses was small (fewer than 5,000 a year) and mainly limited to reunified families and immigrant women experiencing social distress. However, after the introduction of the Integration Agreement, the number of participants increased to 30,000 in 2011, and to 40,000 in 2013. Formal language training is mostly managed by the Ministry of Education, University, and Research in the framework of adult education, through permanent centres established at local level for adult education and training, previously known as Permanent Territorial Centres (Centri Territoriali Permanenti, CPIs) and now as Provincial Centres for Adult Education (Centri Provinciali per l'Istruzione degli Adulti, CPIAs). In the 1990s, due to the increase in migration flows, these organisations extended their activities from life-long learning to social integration. In the light of the nature of the centres for adult education, as well as of the structure of the immigrant population by level of education, course participants are often immigrants.<sup>28</sup> Until 2007, there was no minimum compulsory level of language proficiency in order to obtain or renew the residence permit. Since 2007, the A2 level of language

The A2 language proficiency level corresponds to a basic level in terms of understanding, writing, and reading. The integration agreement is targeted at foreigners being over 16 years of age, who arrive in Italy for the first time, and apply for a long-term residence permit not inferior to one year. However, also those who apply for an EC long-term residence permit must pass an Italian language test (Article 9 of Legislative Decree No. 286 of 25 July 1998, Consolidated text of provisions governing immigration and the status of aliens – Decreto legislativo 25 luglio 1998, n. 25, Testo unico delle disposizioni concernenti la disciplina dell’immigrazione e norme sulla condizione dello straniero – so-called ‘Consolidated Text on Immigration’, introduced by Article 22, paragraph 22, letter i of Law No. 94 of 15 July 2009, Provisions on public security – Legge 15 luglio 2009, n. 94, Disposizioni in materia di sicurezza pubblica – so-called ‘Security Package’). Beyond these obligations, there exist a number of Italian language courses organised by public institutions and private organisations belonging to the social sector, which are free of charge and often financed with European funds (European Social Fund – ESF, European Investment Fund – EIF, etc.) or based on resources made available by third-sector volunteer organisations or on existing institutional structures (e.g. in several cases adult training centres offer Italian language courses for foreigners). Due to territorial fragmentation, it is difficult to map the coverage, extension, and quality of these courses. There is no available national mapping of this phenomenon, although there exist some local mappings – for administrative support and research purposes –, especially in the largest urban centres (Rome and Milan).

The impact of language courses on the outcomes in terms of employment has not been analysed. An exact count of the number of participants is not available; however, the increase in the number of registrations at CPIAs has not been compared to the growth of the target population. Outside the adult education system, courses offered by a large variety of organisations meet basic literacy needs. All in all, the maximum amount of training hours is relatively low compared to other OECD countries, although it seems that the demand for advanced language training, or the capacity to offer it is weak. A part of the incentive to participate in these courses seems to be based on the fact that they are necessary to obtain the residence permit.<sup>35</sup>

1.2.5 Funding integration policies (EIF, ERF, EMIF)

Please provide information about the distribution of funds for integration of migrants, as well as their social inclusion and participation. In particular, provide specific breakdown of funding per general area of integration policies – with particular focus on active citizenship, participation, welcoming society, social cohesion - in the last year and for the period 2010-2014 if available. (Use the table in the Annex 5).	Within the national framework, the activities aimed at integration are co-funded by the Government and national authorities, although funding at national level, envisaged for 2012, was very limited, with EUR 6.2 million from the National Fund for Migration Policies. The activities concern interventions targeted at fostering the access to the labour market, the fight against undeclared work, as well as the promotion of social cohesion through cultural actions related to mediation, language literacy, training on civic values, and vocational training. The different priorities and objectives are set out in regional laws, and most expenses are decided at local and regional level. It is however not possible to identify which integration measures attract higher investments. Regional budgets are not always clear about the nature of expenses. The majority of budget lines are general, and refer to the objective of a national or regional framework law. They could also include funding in favour of consultancy and advisory organisations, as well as of observatories. While social integration is part of the general objectives, vocational training is only seldom included in a specific budget line. In particular, two categories benefit from most of the municipal resources, and contribute to explaining the

		higher costs reported by Municipalities compared to the ones reported by Regions: foreign unaccompanied minors; costs for hosting them are shouldered mostly by municipal budgets. The services related to these minors (averagely, more than 5,000 per year at the end of 2000, and more than 6,000 at the end of 2014) are very expensive. ANCI estimated a total cost for Municipalities amounting to EUR 200 million in 2013, of which about 10% is financed by specific national funds. The second group consists of asylum-seekers, since the activities of the Asylum-Seekers and Refugees Protection System (Sistema di protezione per richiedenti asilo e rifugiati, SPRAR) are included in the expense items related to immigrants in participating Municipalities' budgets. Regions sometimes encounter difficulties in spending the resources that have been planned for the implementation of integration initiatives. The whole funding was already included in regional budgets; however, out of a total of EUR 31 million originally budgeted, only 18% thereof was actually spent; moreover, 58% was allocated to projects, but was not actually transferred. After three years, unspent funds cannot be disbursed anymore, and get back to the Region. Economic funds, which encompassed 23% of total funding, got back into the general regional budget, although the legislation approved in 2013 keeps them within the same intervention area. At regional and local level, the situation is very fragmented, and features a framework in which over the years most Regions have reduced local expenses for immigration-related interventions and social services.<sup>45</sup> The reasons for this are not very clear however the phenomenon regards many fields of the public administration intervention at regional level and has been investigated in the literature: it is due to a mix of administrative hurdles, inadequacy of service provides, or funds wrongly channelled into sectors that do not require interventions<sup>46</sup>.

Please indicate differences between ethnic/ migrant groups, living in different geographic areas, gender and age, as well as trends in time.	Looking at the initiatives aimed at eliminating any discrimination, and at promoting an inclusion policy, Italy shows some shortcomings at to analyses, surveys, and polls on migrants' and their descendants' awareness about the right to equal treatment. Migrants have low awareness of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, and in particular of its Article 31 (Fair and just working conditions), paragraph 1 which states: "Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity." Research<sup>51</sup> shows that 7 out of 10 Italians are aware of the meaning of 'occupational disease', while only 4 out of 10 foreigners are aware thereof. Among the most aware are those with higher educational qualifications, those who have been living in Italy for longer, those who come from Centre and South America or from Central and Eastern Europe, and the ones living in north-western Regions. On the other hand, youths, people with lower educational qualifications, foreigners coming from Asian countries, and those who live in southern Regions, Sicily, and Sardinia turn out to be less aware. As to rights in case of occupational disease, Italians and foreigners answer in a similar way, but as many as 32% of immigrants cannot mention any right (the percentage is higher among foreigners from Asian countries: 42% of them can not) vs 12% of Italians. Taking into account all the answers, the services foreigners think to be entitled to in case of occupational disease are primarily healthcare services: about 3 out of 10 foreigners and 4 out of 10 Italians point to them. Close behind in the ranking are economic allowances for both targets. Foreigners are not very familiar with the recognition of disabilities. The fear of being subjected to personal intimidation in the workplace in case of occupational disease is high for both targets. In this sense, it is fundamental for most of them to resort to specific agencies to manage the relationships with their employer. It is because of the risk of being subjected to intimidation

And among those who have experienced (directly or through a family member) occupational diseases, both Italians and foreigners, there is a higher percentage of people maintaining that the risk of retaliation is very high. In detail, about 7 out of 10 Italians and the same proportions of foreigners state that the employees who have contracted an occupational disease could immediately waive the right to claim damages for fear of losing their job. The sample is split in both target groups as to the possibility that employers help their employees (among foreigners, the most likely to think so are from Centre and South America and from Asian countries, while people from Central and Eastern Europe are the least likely to have this opinion). It is fundamental for 7 out of 10 Italians and for the same proportion of foreigners to resort to specialised agencies in order to manage the relationships with their own employer. Research also shows that the recognition of an occupational disease is more widespread among Italians than foreigners (62% vs 49%). Italians are more likely to contact employers' organisations and trade unions (37%); on the other hand, the majority of foreigners report having turned to the physician or a hospital (41%), the National Institution for Insurance against Accidents at Work (Istituto nazionale per l'assicurazione contro gli infortuni sul lavoro, Inail) (21%), and employers' organisations/trade unions (13%). About 6 out of 10 Italian blue-collar workers/clerks and 5 out of 10 foreigners are aware of the existence of a security manager in the workplace. Compared to Italians, foreigners are more aware of the attention paid to health at work in Italy. However, foreigners' awareness of the attention paid to health in their own workplace is weaker than Italians'. Looking at the initiatives aimed at eliminating any discrimination, and at promoting an inclusion policy, Italy features some shortcomings as to analyses, surveys, and polls on migrants' and their descendants' awareness about the right to equal treatment. In October 2014, the National Institute of Statistics (Istituto Nazionale di Statistica, Istat) published the result of the research 'Foreign citizens' perceptions: satisfaction, trust, and discrimination' (Percezioni dei cittadini stranieri: soddisfazione, fiducia e discriminazione) carried out in 2011-2012, which outlines that 29.1% of foreigners aged 15 and over report having been subjected to forms of discrimination in Italy, based on their foreign origin or their characteristics. 		foreigners have been subjected to less favourable conditions in the workplace or while they were looking for a job: specifically, 16.9% in the workplace, and 9.3% while searching for a job. In the working environment, women, more often than men, perceive an unfriendly attitude by colleagues/supervisors/clients (respectively, 53% vs 46.8%). Men more often declare having been assigned excessive or punitive workloads (31.6% vs 24% of women). Among foreigners who have declared having been discriminated against in the workplace, 89.5% think that this occurred based on their own origin, 22.9% on the basis of their poor knowledge of the Italian language, and 14.6% because of the colour of their skin. At the moment disaggregated data about the differences among different ethnic/migrant groups and different geographic areas are not available. A share of 12.6% of foreigner aged 6 and over, who have started their studies in Italy, report having being discriminated against in this field. The most disadvantaged groups are foreign women (14.2%) and youngsters aged between 14 and 19 (17.4%). The discriminatory behaviour is most often adopted by their peers in the same study course (78.4%), less frequently by teachers (35%) and school administrative staff (8.8%). A share of 10.5% of foreigners have been discriminated against while they were looking for an accommodation, 8.1% in public venues/offices or on public transportation, and 6.2% by their neighbours. The percentage of foreigners who perceive a hostile environment to the extent that they feel compelled to move somewhere else is risible (3.7%). The ones who are most often satisfied with their job are Filipinos and Moldavians, as well as Indians: with their average satisfaction scores equal to eight, they are above the average. Chinese and Ukrainians, instead, are less satisfied, featuring an average score of 7.3. In this case too, the degree of satisfaction with one's own job is more elevated for foreigners with a higher educational attainment, and for those who live in centre and northern Regions.<sup>52</sup>

In Italy the implementation process of concrete measures was initiated at the beginning of 2014 by Cécile Kyenge Kashetu, the then Minister for Integration. 2.2.1.Long Term Residence (LTR) status holders (Art.11 of the Directive 2003/109/EC)	In Italy, as of 1 January 2014, on the basis of data provided by the Ministry of the Interior, there are 3,874,726 non-EU citizens regularly residing in Italy. Between 2013 and 2014, the number of non EU-

	citizens regularly residing increased by about 110,000 units (+3%). The most represented countries of citizenship are Morocco (524,775), Albania (502,546), China (320,794), Ukraine (233,726), and the Philippines (165,783). These five countries represent 45.1% of the total number of non-EU citizens residing in Italy. The number of long-term residents keeps growing: from 2,045,662 in 2013 to 2,179,607 in 2014; they represent 56.3% of non-EU citizens regularly residing in Italy. The share of long-term residents over the total number is particularly high in centre-northern Regions.<sup>63</sup> The lack of income cannot justify the revocation of EU residence permits for long-term residents. A foreign citizen, residing in Italy for a long time, was denied the update of his residence permit because he did not have a regular job, and therefore lacked a source of income. With Judgement No. 128 of 14 January 2015, the court - Regional Administrative Court of Lombardy, ruling of January 14, 2015 n. 128 - recalled that the law does not allow authorities to withdraw a long-term residence permit, and thus to refuse to update the permit on the grounds of the lack of a regular job, and subsequently of a level of income adequate to the foreigner's permanence on the national territory. The appeal was upheld, and the contested measure was set aside.<sup>64</sup>
2.2.2. Single-permit procedure permit holders (Art.12 and 13 of the Directive 2011/98/EU)	One of the main problems affecting the implementation of equal treatment towards people holding a residence permit in Italy, concerns issuance times of residence permits. The OECD report (2014) outlines that foreigners from non-EU/EFTA countries are allowed into our country on a temporary basis, and in the majority of cases the renewal of the permit is linked to being in employment. There are no data available demonstrating that this is what happens in reality, but the loss of employment and high employment rates, above all among new immigrants and those who have not been deemed eligible for family reunification, could encourage some of them to go back to their countries of origin. Long delays in decisions related to the issuance of permits should be avoided so as to reduce the cases of permanence beyond the expiry of the permit, and to combat undeclared and irregular labour in Italy. Processing times of applications for a labour permit have historically been very long, and it takes months or years for a worker to obtain it. In the meantime the job position is no more available, and the immigrant becomes unemployed. In the case of

2.2.3. Blue card holders (Art.14 and 12 of the Directive 2009/50/EC)	As to Blue Card holders, Decree Law No. 145 of 23 December 2013, Urgent interventions to launch the plan 'Destination: Italy' (Decreto Legge 23 dicembre 2013, n. 145, recante interventi urgenti di avvio del piano "Destinazione Italia") eliminated the consistency requirement between educational qualifications and professional qualifications for high-skilled workers, as set out in paragraph 8, letters d and e of Council Directive 2009/50/EC on the conditions of entry and residence of third-country nationals for the purposes of highly qualified employment: the measure overcomes the state of uncertainty which, in practice, has hampered the application in Italy of the new EU rules on the Blue Card.
2.2.4. Family reunification permit holders (specifically in terms of access to labour market - Art. 14 of Directive 2003/86/EC)	As to residence permits for family reunification, in Italy the main problems are due to administrative delays in issuing permits. In the Region of Lazio, the Regional Administrative Tribunal (Tribunale Amministrativo Regionale, TAR) orders the Ministry of the Interior to identify, within one year, the solutions useful to finalise procedures within 90 days. In particular, the intervention of TAR has been requested to induce the Ministry of the Interior to adopt a decision according to which all the Police Headquarters (Questure) issue the EC permit to family members, albeit residing in Italy for less than five years, thus complying with the interpretation of Article 9 of the Consolidated Law on Immigration, provided in recent years in administrative case law. TAR of Lazio, with a judgement of 6 September 2014, declared the collective action admissible, and upheld the first part of the appeal, ordering the Ministry of the Interior to 'tackle such a situation of non-compliance with the term of 90 days for the finalisation of the procedure pursuant to Article 9 of the Consolidated Law on Immigration (concerning the release to family members of the EC long-term residence permit) through the adoption of appropriate measures, within one year, and within the constraints imposed by instrumental, financial, and human resources already planned in the regular budget, and without new or higher burden on public finances'.<sup>66</sup>

2.2.5. Beneficiaries of international protection long term residence status holders<sup>67</sup>	The issue and update of the EU residence permit for long-term residents is dealt with in different ways across the national territory<sup>68</sup>. The following should indeed be noted: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• a minimum of five years of stay is required when the application concerns family members;</li> <li>• the requirement of suitability of the accommodation must be fulfilled when the application is submitted by a foreigner meeting all the requirements;</li> <li>• there are different and conflicting interpretations of the requirement of suitability of the accommodation when children under 14 years of age are involved;</li> <li>• the income requirement must be proved when the permit is updated;</li> <li>• a job contract exceeding six months is required;</li> <li>• the grant of a long-term permit is automatically refused in the case of criminal convictions;</li> <li>• there is no notification about any reasons hindering the release of the permit; in this case, the previously held simple residence permit is renewed;</li> <li>• family members of foreigners holding an EU residence permit, who have arrived in the country pursuant to the family reunification procedure, are not granted the same type of permit, but a normal residence permit for family reasons, although they meet all the requirements to obtain an EU residence permit;</li> <li>• there is great uncertainty about the application of Article 9a of the Consolidated Text on Immigration, which envisages the possibility for foreigners holding an equivalent permit issued by an EU Member State to request an Italian residence permit when they work in the country for more than six months. Indeed, in the framework of the 2007 Decree on Migrant Flows<sup>69</sup> this possibility depended on available entry quotas on inward flows of migrants, with a restrictive interpretation of the law; this interpretation did not comply with the objectives stated in Council Directive</li> </ul>

In particular, Article 6 sets out a two-year duration of the residence permit for humanitarian purposes. The two-year residence permit for humanitarian purposes is issued by the Police Commissioner (Questore) upon the request of the Territorial Commission (Commissione territoriale) which, while rejecting the applicant's request for international protection, deems that there exist serious humanitarian reasons.<sup>70</sup> Furthermore, the Ministry of the Interior dispatched to local offices Circular No. 1724 of 20 February 2015 (Circolare n. 1724 del 20 febbraio 2015) containing clarifications on the permanence of people applying for/holding international protection within the Hosting Centres for Asylum-Seekers (Centri di accoglienza per i richiedenti asilo, CARA): they are allowed to stay even after the Territorial Commission's decision to reject the application for the recognition of international protection, up until the expiry of the deadline to appeal and/or up until the decision on the suspension request submitted pursuant to Article 19 of Legislative Decree No. 150 of 1 September 2011, Legislation complementing the Civil Procedure Code, concerning reduction and simplification of civil proceedings on the merits, pursuant to Article 54 of Law No. 69 of 18 June 2009 (Decreto legislativo 1

2.3. Key developments and trends
	Please include in this section key developments in the area of equal treatment and anti-discrimination that concern only migrants and/or their descendants. Key developments may be new legislation or policies, abolition, update, improvement or reform of existing ones, as well as important case law, court, equality body or administrative cases, that have had or may have an impact on the implementation of the anti-discrimination legislation and equal treatment policies that related to the rights of migrants and/or their descendants (for presentation of case law, use template in Annex 9). Such developments may also affect the actual situation on the ground, including public debates and perceptions among the native population and migrants. At national level, the main developments concern the implementation of the equality and non-discrimination principle. In particular, in 2013 UNAR was tasked with elaborating, defining, and operating an Action Plan against Racism, Xenophobia, and Intolerance to be implemented in the 2013-2015 period, which at the moment has still to be finalised.<sup>72</sup> Moreover, in order to promote social integration, and combat discrimination of any type, the Department for Equal Opportunities of the Presidency of the Council of Ministers, in cooperation with the National Lawyers' Council (Consiglio Nazionale Forense) and UNAR (which belongs to the same department), created the Solidarity Fund for the Legal Protection of Victims of Discrimination. The Fund enables the victims of discrimination to obtain legal protection thanks to the possibility of accessing funds to cover legal fees which will then be reimbursed, through a rotation mechanism, in case a favourable judgement is obtained. The 'economic' aid offered to people suffering discrimination or harassment could contribute to bringing this phenomenon to light, since there are very few legal actions while the number of complaints lodged with UNAR is high.<sup>73</sup> By means of Article 7 of Law No. 97 of 6 August 2013, Provisions to comply with obligations descending from Italy's membership to the European Union – 2013 European Law (Legge 6 agosto 2013, n. 97, Disposizioni per l'adempimento degli obblighi derivanti dall'appartenenza dell'Italia all'Unione europea – Legge europea 2013), which modified Article 38 of Legislative Decree No. 165 of 30 March

		2001, General provisions on the employment system of public service (Decreto legislativo 30 marzo 2001, n. 165, Norme generali sull'ordinamento del lavoro alle dipendenze delle amministrazioni pubbliche), Italy introduced an important element concerning foreigners' access to jobs within public administrations. Pursuant to the new regulation, both Italian and EU citizens, and foreigners can participate in open competitions. However, the new provision does not apply to all non-EU citizens, but only to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- people holding an EU permit for long-term residents;</li> <li>- people who have been granted international protection;</li> <li>- non-EU family members of EU citizens, who have the right of residence or of permanent residence.</li> </ul> With an order of 4 March 2015, the Tribunal of Milan has recently stated that the open call for the set-up of three-year ranking lists for temporary teaching vacancies (Ministerial Decree No. 353 of 22 May 2014 – Decreto ministeriale 22 maggio 2014, n. 353) is discriminatory inasmuch as this call sets forth the requirement of Italian or EU citizenship; therefore, foreign teachers, too, can access ranking lists for temporary teachers.<sup>74</sup> In order to speed up the whole application procedure to obtain the Italian citizenship, thus simplifying the data entry step, starting on 18 May 2015 it will be possible to submit applications online through a new system. The new service has been fine-tuned by the Ministry of the Interior, Department for the Electronic Submission of Applications for Italian Citizenship. The applicant will fill out the form, using credentials obtained upon registering on the portal.<sup>75</sup> S/he will submit the application in electronic format, along with an ID document, documents issued by the authorities of the country of origin (birth certificate or criminal records) as well as receipt of payment of EUR 200 as set out in Law No. 94/2009.<sup>76</sup>

In this section please provide the specific requirements and criteria for participation of citizens of migrant background (and third country nationals in the very few cases where this is foreseen) in national elections, as well as any available data on their voting turnout. Please	In Italy the right to vote at the national level is not granted to third country nationals.  The last true attempt to pass a law <sup>81</sup> on this matter was during the fifteenth legislature (April 2006-February 2008), when the Amato-Ferrero bill for a new immigration law was introduced on 24 April 2007. As it has been the case for most of the proposals mentioned so far, the part regarding electoral rights for TCN's was explicitly inspired by the text of the Convention on the Participation of Foreigners in Public Life at Local Level (CoE Treaty 144, 5 February 1992). This document was ratified by Italy in 1994, with the exception of Chapter C on the right to vote in local authority elections, since it was considered to be in conflict with the above mentioned article 48 of the Constitution. With the premature dissolution of the centre-left government, led by Mr. Romano Prodi, the bill was abandoned and any decision deferred until after the 2008 elections which were won by the coalition led by Mr Silvio

Parties forming the coalition were strongly against the enfranchisement of third country nationals. This was the case even though the former leader of the National Alliance, Gianfranco Fini, had already in 2003 changed his previous negative stance towards the enfranchisement of long-term resident immigrants and has even become an advocate of voting rights for the immigrants. Yet, in the last decade the question of electoral participation at local level for TCNs has constantly gained momentum in the political debate. For example, the Democratic Party (Partito Democratico) has granted the right to vote to all documented TCNs in the primaries held in November and December 2012 to decide the candidate for prime minister in view of the elections of 2013.<sup>13</sup> But the most effective actions are due to the consistency of NGOs like Rete G2-Seconde generazioni (The Second generation Network), National Association of Italian Municipalities (ANCI), the Catholic Caritas, the left wing ARCI, and other sectors of civil society, which have been campaigning for a reform of the legislation on citizenship in more liberal terms and to grant immigrants the right to vote in local elections. In March 2012 a bill was introduced to the Chamber of deputies by means of such popular initiatives.
	Please indicate any programmes or information campaigns aiming at informing citizens of migrant background about their political rights and encouraging the exercise of the right to vote.	Currently, on the national outlook there are no programs or specific information campaigns for the promotion and encouragement of political rights and the exercise of the right to vote directed to migrant citizens. However, they are included in other initiatives of a general nature such as the Second Generations' Manifesto, the result of the Direct line with the second generation initiative, promoted during 2014, following a public call launched by the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy on the Migrant integration portal, which involved more than 30 associations of young second-generation migrants active throughout the national territory. The Manifesto is divided into four sections, devoted to the themes work, school, culture and sport, participation and active citizenship, in respect of which have been developed and proposed concrete solutions, adaptable to the diverse local and specific needs of the recipients. In particular for participation and active citizenship it was proposed to: "9. Strengthen the information services on the rights and opportunities of participation"; 10. "Encourage associative life, active citizenship, and equal opportunities."<sup>82</sup> As part of the "Italy is me too" campaign, nineteen Italian CSOs, by reinventing the text contained in the Anci bill of 2005, became the promoters of a statute-book bill driven by the people's initiative for the extension of the right to active and passive constituency in "municipal, provincial elections, concerning metropolitan cities", as well as

3.2.1. Regional/Local elections voting rights – turnout
	Specify what regional/local voting rights are given to third country nationals and any different entitlements according to residence status, permit type or length of stay etc.	In Italy, to date, foreigners do not enjoy the right to active or passive constituency in local elections. The uncertainty on the legal instrument to use to extend voting rights to foreigners has undoubtedly influenced this state of affairs. The right to vote seems in fact subordinated to the acquisition of nationality (Article 48 of the Constitution) and the extension of voting rights would thus require a constitutional law; however, in the last decade, some judgments of the Constitutional Court and the State Council seemed to support the constitutionality of the use of statute-book law to regulate the matter.<sup>86</sup> The recognition of the right to vote for non-EU foreigners in local elections has been, particularly in recent years, the subject of a number of interventions by regional and local authorities. Among these, the initiative of the Genoa municipality which granted with a resolution the extension of active and passive constituency to non-EU citizens in municipal elections. The Government has annulled the resolution following the opinion of the State Council as well, which recognized the existence of the conditions for the annulment of the act. Similar initiatives by the Ancona and Turin municipalities were annulled by the Government<sup>87</sup>. The assignment of the right to vote in regional referendums to immigrants is, however, considered legitimate by the Constitutional Court which recognized in the area of potential determinations by the Regions the choice to engage in other forms of consultation and participation individuals who take part knowingly, and with at least some relative stability, to associative life, regardless of their ownership of the right to vote or Italian citizenship. Likewise, the Constitutional Court declared legitimate the power of the regional statute to promote the extension of voting rights, given the cultural and political and certainly

	Key and/or milestone dates regarding the voting and/or election rights for migrants and/or their descendants at regional/local level	More numerous and more recent have been the initiatives undertaken at the local level to extend the rights of political participation of foreigners. Naples' City Council approved in January of 2012 a regulation extending to "citizens who are at least sixteen years of age, EU and non-EU residents, the right to vote in municipal referendums".<sup>89</sup> Along the same lines moved the City of Turin, which in March of 2012 changed its Statute by adding the enrollment for at least six months in the municipal register of the resident population as a requirement for the recognition and guarantee of "individual and collective rights of participation" (requests and petitions, proposed resolutions of popular initiative, consultative referendums and repeals). These are experiences that were taken as a model, albeit in different versions, by other realities, in smaller centers. At the beginning of 2013, then, Rome's new Statute too granted the extension of civil rights and popular participation, albeit with less innovative drive compared to the previous cases: Article 6 (holders of participation rights) grants indeed that "the rights attached to instruments of participation by citizens shall apply, except as provided in the area of referendums and popular action, besides to citizens registered to vote in the City of Rome: a) to citizens not resident in Rome, who enjoy the rights to active constituency and therein exercise their main work activity; b) to students not living in Rome, who enjoy the rights to active constituency and therein exercise their proven study activities in schools or universities; c) to foreigners who have reached the age of eighteen, lawfully present in the country and living in Rome or therein domiciled for study or work." The resolution of the Forlì municipality on April 9, 2001 amended Article 50 of the Statute, by extending the right to vote in district elections to non-EU foreigners regularly resident by at least two years.
	Please indicate any programmes or information campaigns aiming at informing citizens of migrant background about their political rights and encouraging the exercise of the right to vote.	The I PARTICIPATE project aims to enhance and support the integration process of third-country nationals promoting their participation in the democratic process at local level and fostering their active citizenship. In particular the project will strive to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• promote political participation of immigrants at local level as well as their role as reliable partners in the decision making process on integration policies and other local issues</li> <li>• promote education programmes on active citizenship of immigrants addressed to decision makers at local level, local community councils for foreigners, immigrants and their associations.<sup>90</sup></li> </ul>

	Please identify related limitations and challenges or public debates, as well as relevant research, studies and assessments.	The Italian case was characterized by a fairly rapid and unstructured development of the migratory phenomenon, accompanied by a weak institutional direction. It is not surprising, in such a framework, that the prospects for political integration of foreigners traditionally occupy a marginal space. On the one hand, as we shall see, a varied range of institutional participatory channels dedicated to immigrants and their associations developed locally, related de facto to forms of civic and symbolic rather than political participation – given the low mobilization capacity of these organisms and their purely advisory nature. On the other hand, in the public debate on immigration, usually reduced to emergency readings, the challenges of political participation have remained in the background – except to be subject to occasional " spikes in attention " (e.g. the right to vote and the amendments to Citizenship Law) and to more frequent invocations of restrictive nature by openly anti-immigrant political and social actors. More generally, it is possible to experience, in a portion of the foreign population at least, a call for greater public prominence that is expressed in an intermediate space whose boundaries

The Councils and deputy councilors can be formed at the regional, provincial, municipal, inter-municipal or town level, may be either elective or nominative, but the main feature is their extreme variety and diversification. The Councils are organisms whose composition should reflect the presence of the various stakeholders in the field of integration policies for migrants, including migrant associations. The first National Council for the problems of non-EU workers and their families had been established at the Ministry of Labour and Social Security by Law 943/86 (art. 2), which also included the establishment of regional Councils (art. 2 c.7).<sup>93</sup> A first mapping of the Councils of foreigners at the local level in Italy up to March 31, 2013 showed the presence of: 14 regional Councils for immigration, 48 municipal Councils, 19 provincial Councils, 29 foreign deputy Councilors and 17 regions with a Register or Roster of associations working in favor of foreign residents in Italy. These are just the initial data from the focus on "Participation and Citizenship" carried out by the editors of the Migrant Integration Portal.<sup>94</sup> The Council of foreign citizens and stateless persons in the Bologna Province is an attempt made by the Bolognese provincial administration to answer to the problem of legal incapacity for non-EU citizens determined by national legislation. 	particular specify if and by which modalities these bodies are competent to participate in consultations only on migration or integration issues or if they participate also in consultations on other issues? How do these bodies work in practice?	the one hand the task of identifying, from time to time, correspondence or lack thereof of any interventions to these areas is difficult to say the least; on the other hand it should be noted that the idea in itself to limit the involvement of the Councils in question to special and reserved areas does not seem to go in the sense of a real and proper integration.<sup>96</sup> In Italy foreigners' direct political participation occurs within advisory boards since the current legislation does not yet grant them the right to vote in local elections, despite this issue has been widely debated in recent years. There are several new elements introduced at territorial level with the aim of bringing foreigners without citizenship closer to institutions: this is made possible thanks to their involvement in political life through advisory intermediate bodies which are currently to be found in several Regions and local authorities<sup>97</sup>. Foreigners' Councils and Boards represent different types of attempts, by local administrations mainly at municipal level and to a lesser extent at provincial level, to give voice and visibility to foreign citizens who are not entitled to vote in local elections. These participatory practices promoted by local authorities and aimed at fostering migrants' integration in the territory, have developed under different forms: Foreigners' Councils and Boards are collective organisms whose president and/or vice-president takes part in meetings of Municipal and Provincial Councils as adjunct councillor. The models that have been experimented fall under two patterns: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• an elective model: the Foreigners' Council;</li> <li>• a non-elective model: the Foreigners' Board.</li> </ul> The non-elective model (Foreigners' Boards) envisages different forms of membership compared to the elective model, such as the involvement of territorial associations (which may appoint their representatives). Both in Foreigners' Boards and in Foreigners' Councils the president or vice-president is assigned the role of adjunct councillor, and is entitled to be informed about the agenda of Municipal and Provincial Councils, to participate in permanent commissions, and to take the floor during meetings. The literature on this topic shows that, after the start-up and trial phase full of enthusiasm, the institutional participation of foreigners in Italy has often experienced uncertainty, with too great a set of expectations and the emergence of some criticalities. For instance, in the framework of the practices implemented in Emilia-Romagna, which have been frequently analysed in

The Council was established with the aim of filling the gap between the political and administrative capacity of foreign nationals and that of the remainder of the population, within the terms and conditions set out in legislation. The establishment of this body therefore caters to both the specific interests of the immigrant population, and a general public interest: that of the whole population of the Province of Bologna, so that it can be fully represented. The establishment of the Council also stems from the will to act to ensure that resident foreigners' right to vote in local elections is recognised by national legislation. [...] The Council consists of 30 councillors, and is the first elected body representing the foreign population at provincial level. [...] The Council was elected on Sunday, 2 December 2007. Over 9,200 voters cast their ballots, out of about 43,000 residents in the Province of Bologna who had the right to vote. The overall voter turnout was higher than 21% (slightly under 17% for women, and at 25.2% for men). A total of 32 electoral rolls with 275 candidates stood in the elections." The Council was active from 2007 to 2014 when it was abolished along with the Provincial Council of Bologna pursuant to Law No. 56 of 7 April 2014, Provisions on Metropolitan Areas, Provinces, and Municipal Associations and Mergers (Legge 7 aprile 2014, n. 56, Disposizioni sulle

This character reveals one of the main and additional limitations of these participatory tools because it highlights their lack of incisiveness on regional policies regarding immigration. However, part of the doctrine recognized a significant exception in the case of the Liguria Region, which binds the preparation of the Regional plan draft for the integration of foreign citizens to a recommendation made by the Council for immigrants. According to this view, the Liguria Region has developed a "strong participatory model" precisely because of the power of initiative granted to the Council for foreigners.<sup>102</sup>

Are such bodies and/or their representatives participating in any way to allocation, distribution, monitoring, evaluation or management of funding social inclusion and integration policies, measures and programmes at national level?	Without denying that these experiences have had positive effects as well, there is now a widespread consensus on their general failure. In fact, most of the mechanisms for consultation and representation of foreigners, gradually developed on a territorial basis, has maintained a faded and poorly incisive profile, or has ceased to exist altogether. In their entirety, these participatory channels have resulted into scarcely visible, poorly participated initiatives of little relevance - if not at the symbolic level -, in the arena of local political decision-making.<sup>103</sup> The Consolidated Text on Immigration (Article 42, paragraph 4) envisaged the creation of the Board of Migrant Workers and Their Families within the Presidency of the Council of Ministers. The tasks and composition of the Board are similar to those of its predecessor. About this, we can mention cases in the Liguria, Lazio, and Marche regions, which give Councils the power to adopt rules to govern their own modes of organization and operation. In the opposite direction, however, are the provisions by the Emilia Romagna and Tuscany regions, which give power to the Regional Council. It should also be noted that the method of appointment of these foreign members are either not clearly regulated, or entrust the choice to co-optative mechanisms.<sup>105</sup>

	On which criterion are migrant groups represented (migrant status, foreign-born, foreign nationality etc.)? What is foreseen and how is it implemented in practice?	Poor representation characterizes all advisory bodies in question. This is due to several reasons including the fact that most of the aforementioned advisory bodies host a small, or not clearly defined, component of foreign representatives. About this we are reminded of the cases of the now-abolished Councils of the Abruzzo and Friuli Venezia Giulia regions and the newer ones of the Liguria, Marche, and Tuscany regions. In this respect, only the Emilia Romagna and Lazio regions have moved in contrast. The first granted all a majority of seats for foreigners (about 18 out of 34 total members) within the Regional Council for the social integration of foreign citizens; the second, in addition granting a majority to the foreign component (about 15 out of 29 total members), with art. 24 of I.r. 14/07/08 n. 10 has established an explicit majority guarantee in favor of immigrants.<sup>106</sup> Migrant associations<sup>107</sup> entitled to appoint representatives sitting in Boards (at different institutional levels) are required to be 'the most representative in Italy'. The definition is similar as to the National Board on the Problems of Migrant Workers and Their Families as well as the Territorial Immigration Councils. Several authors outline the problems linked to the lack of representativeness of these organisms: members are not elected but are appointed by co-option, without taking into account the actual representativeness of the organisations that designate them<sup>108</sup>. The literature on this topic has stigmatised in recent years the numerically scant presence of immigrants within these bodies – compared to the total number of members – which does not enable them to have their opinions taken into due account. The fact that associations have little opportunity to influence integration policies has actually reduced their participation in these bodies which have become purely formal organisms. The quantitative survey<sup>109</sup> has shown that in the areas where Boards are active and carry out their tasks, the participation rate of associations is rather elevated (75% of interviewees in Emilia-Romagna).

		As to Boards, 53% of migrants' associations involved in the survey <sup>110</sup> take part in local ones, and only 4 out of 118 also participate in Boards (not specifically on immigration) at national level. In 17% of cases, Boards are instead deemed to be useless.
	Is there any evidence through formal evaluations or academic research on awareness about such national level consultative bodies among migrants and their descendants, and among the general public?	A recent study highlighted that "The substantial retreat of political integration in recent years - next to the 'sinking' of bills on administrative voting and citizenship - has made even more obvious the palliative character and inefficacy of these institutional channels for intermediate participation. <sup>110</sup> The associations that took part in the interviews are 16 in Calabria, 57 in Emilia-Romagna, and 44 in Lazio. They differ greatly in terms of when they were set up: only 40% of them were established more than 10 years ago, whereas 20% were set up between 5 and 10 years ago, and the remaining 40% were born in the last five years. This proportion is similar in Emilia-Romagna and Lazio, whereas in Calabria the structures are reportedly more fragile because three out of four were set up in the last five years.

So it appears that in some provinces of the northeast, the immigrant component is considerable, being now close to 20% of total enrollment, while if we consider only active workers, Bolzano, Piacenza and Forlì-Cesena take over the top, with a percentage close to 30%. In contrast, southern provinces, particularly those of Sassari, Taranto and Brindisi, end up at the bottom of territorial ranking, a logical consequence of the presence of immigrants being concentrated in northern regions (over 60%). Another factor considered by the research is the percentage of registered foreigners in relation to the number of residents: about 10% of immigrant residents in the complex of 41 sampled provinces joined CGIL. The areas with the highest rate of unionization are Trieste (27.9%), also including cross-border workers, Forlì-Cesena (20.1%), Belluno (19.3%) and Ravenna (19%), while Ragusa (18%) is still the most unionized province in the entire South. Finally, the survey measured trends in the CGIL trade union in terms of nationality. In this case, the methodology took into account the top 25 nationalities by number of residents, comparing them with the number of CGIL members in the sampled Italian provinces. Overall, there is still a great difficulty to intercept workers from China and Asia in general, despite some good results obtained with the Indians and Filipinos. There is also an undersizing of the Eastern European component, although in absolute terms the Romanians are the communities with the highest number of subscribers. Moreover, it shows a good grip on African countries, in both northern and sub-Saharan regions, and an excellent performance with workers from the Balkan state as well. Looking through the figures, CGIL membership consolidated its first place in the Romanian community (with 11,756 members), followed by the Moroccans (11,077) and Albanians (10,682). In addition, there are 6,389 members from Serbia and Montenegro, 4,770 Tunisians, 3,880 Swiss, 3,629 Senegalese, 3,593 Indians, and so forth with the other nationalities.<sup>116</sup>

Admission to the registers is considered a necessary condition for the exercise of professions, even in the case of dependent employment. Once the deadline of one year for admission to the registers, associations, and special lists expires, the possibility of new registrations for foreigners who wish to pursue professional activities in Italy will be determined annually by the quota system defined in the decrees for flow programming and from the definition of maximum employment percentages. Foreign citizens who want to exercise a regulated profession in Italy, to pursue an education, or to participate in competitions must hold a professional degree that has legal value in Italy. If they hold a qualification obtained abroad they can start a process of formal recognition to this end.<sup>117</sup> The procedure to obtain recognition in Italy of qualifications obtained abroad is very complex and can involve different bodies depending on the type of degree and the purposes for which recognition is sought.<sup>118119</sup> For example in the medical and health care sector, managed by the Ministry of Health, things are slightly more simple, thanks to the large number of applications for recognition of nurses caused by a growing demand in the labor market. Then there are other professions whose Registers and Associations are supervised by the Ministry of Justice, such as accountants, stockbrokers, agronomists, lawyers, engineers. In this case, the foreigner must submit the application directly to the Ministry, where a number of parameters are verified: enrollment in any register, exercise of the profession in the country of origin. For the purposes of professional recognition and subsequent license, candidates are also subject to the verification of their competencies: the foreigner must thus start studying again certain subjects and take the required exams. This applies to all the countries of origin where there are no specific agreements. 	Do professional associations encourage and support membership and participation of migrant professionals? E.g. through information and raising awareness initiatives in more languages, translation and language support services etc.	Not really, except some specific cases which made the news.  In December 2013, the Association of Chartered Accountants and the Association of Engineers of Palermo decided to voluntarily pay the university registration fees of two sub-Saharanans who got to Lampedusa some years ago on board two different unseaworthy boats. This is an act of solidarity that will help both youths continue to dream of a better tomorrow. For both of them it would have been impossible to pay the university registration fees. The members of the Councils of both Associations took on board the call by Biagio Conte, director of the reception centre that hosts the two youths, and 'opened their wallets' to pay university registration fees <sup>121</sup> .
	What is the rate of participation and membership (figures and % of association members, figures and % of migrant professionals as members, or descriptive data if statistical data is not available) of migrant professionals in the most representative professional, employers' and scientific unions and associations? Please specify the geographic and workforce range/type of associations (referring to national, regional, local and to the range of professional represented and degree of association).	Foreign workers independently employed by type of profession: Craftsmen: the statistical data analyzed concern craftsmen workers registered to the relevant pension fund managed by INPS. The survey unit consists of the person who is registered to the management in the year in question (even for part of the year). In 2013 6.6% of the total craftsmen is immigrant: 123,231 workers out of a total of 1,864,669 subscribers, this percentage is slightly higher compared to that of 2012 (6.3%) and that of 2011 (6.1%). The artisan activity confirms a strong male component both in the general population (80.1%) and among immigrants (85.2%). In 2013, with no significant differences from the previous years, the majority of immigrants have their own company located in the North (72.0%), while for craftsmen in their totality the prevalence is less clear in the North (56.3%). In the Center are located 24.4% of immigrants' artisan companies (compared to 20.8% of the totality), while the percentage is low for those based in the South and Islands (3.5% versus 22.9% of the totality of craftsmen). The region with the highest prevalence of craftsmen immigrants is Lombardy (25.5%), followed by Emilia Romagna (16.8%) and Tuscany (13.6%). Traders: the analysis concerns the traders registered to the related pension fund managed by INPS. The survey unit consists of the person who is registered to the management in the year in question (even for part of the year). In 2013 8.6% traders are immigrants: 175,887 out of a total of 2,311,518. In 2012 a rate of 7.1% was found and of 6.4% in 2011. The breakdown by sex shows, as noted, a predominantly male component (72%), more pronounced in the totality of the workers group as well (64%). From a geographical distribution point of view, 2013 is no different from previous years: most of the traders immigrants have their own trading company based in the North-West (29.0% versus 27.2% of the totality), followed by Central Italy (24.7% versus 20.3%), while in the South 18.3% of workers concentrate (versus 20.9%) and only 9.3% in the Islands. The region with the highest concentration of traders immigrants in 2013 is Lombardy (18.1%), followed by Lazio (13.2%). The immigrants are younger on average than the traders overall, in fact the age groups "25-29 years" (10.4% vs 5.9%) and "30-39 years" (35.6% vs 21.7%) are the most represented. Conversely, in the older age groups, over 60 years, the immigrants are less present (3.9% vs 15.3%). The values refer to 2013 but the same distribution is found in the previous years. In the distribution by age group is interesting to note that while with the traders overall there are no differences between men and women, for the immigrants there is a prevalence of men as we proceed towards higher age groups. This phenomenon is common to all the years analyzed. Based on the country of citizenship, the more prevalent nationalities among traders immigrants in 2013 are Moroccan (24.6%) and Chinese (23.9%), which together account for about half of the immigrants who are trade workers. Followed by Bangladesh (10.9%) and Senegal (7.1%).

Independently-employed agricultural workers: in 2013 in Italy there are 465,330 independently-employed agricultural workers of which 1,574 that is 0.3% of the totality are immigrants. 18.8% of immigrant independently-employed agricultural workers is concentrated in Tuscany and the region in which they are most present is Piedmont (11.2%). The presence of women among immigrant self-employed agricultural workers is much higher (62.5%) compared to that of the national average for this type of workers (35.5%). 34.8% of immigrants belong to the "40-49 years" age group which has the maximum frequency, as with the totality of independently-employed agricultural workers, whose percentage is however lower, 25.2%. When analyzing the classification by citizenship it is evident that Albania is the country from which the largest number of independently-employed agricultural workers come from with a percentage of 16.8%, followed by Switzerland with 10.7%, Tunisia with 8.6%, Moldova with 5.5%, Ukraine with 5.1% and India with 5.0%. In 2011-2013, the percentage distribution by country of citizenship undergoes only minor changes and the order of the first three countries remains unchanged.

Quasi-dependent workers: quasi-dependent workers are classified according to the type of pension payment which reflects the nature of the employment relationship. The taxpayer is classified as a "collaborator" if the contributions are paid by the client. If, however, the contributions are paid by the worker himself, through the mechanism of advances and balances with the same timing and the same terms as personal income tax payments, the taxpayer is classified as a "professional". The annual average of quasi-dependent workers with citizenship in a non-EU country in the period 2011-2013 amounts to 20,983, 21,144, and

		16,908 respectively (the figure for 2013 is provisional, as yet incomplete). In the last year under review, quasi-dependent workers with citizenship in a third country represent 2.0% of the totality, which is equal to 847.595. 63.9% of all quasi-dependent immigrant workers reside in the North, 30.3% in the Centre and only 5.8% in the South. The regions with higher incidences of immigrant workers are Friuli Venezia Giulia (2.8%) and Lombardy (2.6%). Out of 16,908 quasi-dependent immigrant workers, 8,051 are females and 8,856 males; the proportion of women is therefore equal to 47.6%, while among the totality of quasi-dependent workers it is 38.0%. This proportion is confirmed over time. The distribution by age shows a younger community of quasi-dependent immigrant workers compared with the totality of quasi-dependent workers. In particular, 58.4% of immigrants are younger than 40 years while this value drops to 40.1% for the totality of the workers. One out of two quasi-dependent immigrant workers comes from one of the following ten countries: Albania (12.4%), China (7.7%), Morocco (5.1%), Russia (4.8%), Ukraine (4.7 %), United States of America (4.2%), Peru (3.7%), Moldova (3.3%), India (3.1%) and Japan (2.8%). In particular, the top five account for nearly 35% overall, with significant differences between males and females. The percentage of females is in fact highest among the quasi-dependent workers of Ukrainian (77.2%) and Russian (77.0%) citizenship and lowest among the quasi-dependent workers of Indian (20.3%) and Moroccan (39.3%) citizenship.<sup>122</sup> As regards the membership of no-country nationals in liberal professions and scientific associations an ad-hoc fieldwork research has been conducted. 	Are there any legal or practical limitations or barriers for the membership of migrants in professional associations related to	The regualtive framework concerning professional associations related to sports does not allow to enroll children who do not hold an Italian citizenship as members, even if they were born in Italy, due to limitations in citizenship regulation. In March 2015 the Parliament is considering a specific bill to offer a sort of 'sports

	the media, sports and culture?	citizenship' to these children in order to allow them to take part in sports associations.<sup>123</sup> The norms regulating the membership of migrants in professional sports associations are generally very complex and depend on the migrant's nationality of origin. We can look at examples from two of the most practiced sports in Italy, football and volleyball, to gather some of the practical limitations and barriers migrants may encounter. FIGC (Federazione Italiana Giuoco Calcio – Italian Game of Football Federation) regulations<sup>124</sup> state that a team may offer membership to only two players with "status 7" (non-EU immigrants of age who were already members of teams abroad and ask for first-time membership in Italy) but to an unlimited number of players with "status 20" (EU immigrants of age who were already members of teams abroad and ask for first-time membership in Italy). In either case, they also need to provide documents such as a valid residency permit and valid certificate of Italian residency; in the case of minors, they also need certification of school enrollment, birth certificate, photocopy of passport or equivalent document of both the child and the parents. FIPAV-FEDERVOLLEY (Italian Volleyball Federation) regulations<sup>125</sup> state that among the cases in which foreign nationals may be registered as athletes of the Italian Federation are the following two: 1) Athletes under 16 years of age who never were members of foreign federations and whose residency in Italy began before they turned 16. For their first registration, form F1, available online, must be completed, providing a self-certification stating the length of residency in Italy and the reason behind the family's relocation. The following documents must also be attached to the application under penalty of inadmissibility: school enrollment certificate (for non-EU athletes) and a copy of the receipt for the payment of the membership fee. While there is no limitation to the number of athletes who can obtain membership, the interruption of the above conditions (due to a return to their country of origin or transfer to another country) puts the athlete, in the event of a return to Italy, back to foreign status; in the years following the first registration, in compliance with the above situation, the same rules apply for renewal procedures as those for Italian athletes. 2) Athletes who have already turned 16 who never were members of foreign federations and are already residing in Italy. For their first registration, the documents required also include a copy of the residency permit for non-EU athletes (in any case the duration of the entry visa must be over 90 days).

		Furthermore, in compliance with the FIVB's ITC AND PROCEDURES ADMINISTRATIVE FEE REGULATIONS provisions, they can play in Regional and Provincial Championships in Italy only if in possession of ITC NO INTERNATIONAL RIGHTS. Specifically, the athletes may be used in the lower leagues, in regional leagues of the first level, and in the "C" and "D" leagues in an unlimited number; the use of such athletes in the national "B1" and "B2" leagues is instead permitted only provided that they have participated in lower national leagues in the two years following the date of first membership since the 2008/2009 season. The interruption of residency in Italy or of the activity with an Italian team in favor of a foreign one puts the athlete back to foreign status. In both cases (football and volleyball) regulations seem rather complex, and the procedure to become a member of professional sports associations features some discriminations against foreigners. Discrimination in the norms concerning foreign athletes included in federal regulations concerning volleyball<sup>126</sup> The regulation of the Italian Volleyball Federation (Federazione Italiana Pallavolo, FIPAV) discriminates against foreign athletes at several levels, starting from their enrolment, the primary and fundamental condition for being allowed to play. In fact, the club membership of foreign athletes takes effect only when the order for approval by the FIPAV Membership Office is issued, which occurs after the international transfer has been registered by the International Volleyball Federation (FIVB) (Article 46 of FIPAV regulation, Enrolment of 'foreign athletes': approval). The membership of Italian athletes, however, is effective from the moment the request is submitted, according to Article 25 of the same regulation, Athletes' enrolment: approval, notion, competence. This can lead to serious competitive, economic, professional, and business consequences for both foreign athletes and the clubs that have applied for their membership. Similarly, intricate limitations bind clubs to employ a certain minimum number of Italian athletes against a certain maximum number of foreign athletes (e.g. the ban on registering more than two athletes from the same foreign federation in women's Serie A league, as per Article 45 of FIPAV regulation). The rules appear to be discriminatory and detrimental to the principle of free movement against foreign volleyball players who, just as their Italian colleagues, although 'formally' classified as amateur athletes, carry out a paid working activity, continuous over time, within a sports discipline regulated by the Italian Olympic Committee

		(CONI). It can easily be said, then, that the male and female volleyball players of Serie A would fulfil all the requirements necessary to be considered – and therefore protected – as employees. However, FIPAV has – legitimately – opted for the status of amateur, thereby considering as amateurs certain athletes who are ‘actually’ professionals. Nevertheless, EU case law has confirmed that in relation to professional sports workers, it is not possible to discriminate against sports workers – whether Italian, European, or non-EU citizens – in the name of amateurism. Article 44 of Legislative Decree No. 286/1998 allows for the possibility to overcome any discrimination between national and non-EU citizens, in accordance with the principle of free movement of services and the right to work. Non-EU athletes carrying out a paid sports activity can take legal action invoking the provision contained in the above-mentioned legislation. The discipline of Articles 43 and 44 of this legislation is intended to safeguard fundamental rights and to provide for the right to equality and equal treatment in all its forms.

	Is there a visible or notable presence (or absence) of migrants and their descendants as media professionals?	The number of migrants and their descendants as media professionals has increased in the last decade. The Migra agency (Information Agency for Associated Immigrants) was created in 2003 within the European project Equal "The image of migrants in Italy through the media, civil society, and the labor market", with the aim of giving voice to the stakeholders, starting from their point of view and promoting a close cooperation between journalists and Italian immigrants in order to foster a correct representation of foreign communities in the media. Migra was therefore a daily online agency for information and services, the first in Europe to avail itself mainly of immigrant correspondents with the aim of telling the phenomenon of immigration through its main actors and journalistically represent the normality of a now-stable presence within our society, thereby producing significant social and cultural changes. The agency, with a central office of five editorial elements, could also count on the work of two decentralized branches: one in Turin, at the city's Intercultural Center, partner of the Equal project, and one in Bari, at the Abusuan center, which is also a partner. In addition, the Agency has offered consults, preparing interviews, data sheets, contacts with experts, and organizing conferences and seminars on media and communication.<sup>130</sup> ANSI (National Association of Intercultural Press) was born on February 5, 2010 and was officially recognized as a "specialization group" within FNSI, the National Federation of the Italian Press. ANSI was officially recognized by Aidan White, secretary of the IFJ, International Federation of Journalists, and Roberto Natale, president of FNSI. Viorica Nechifor was named president of ANSI. Among the questions still open is the recognition of journalists of foreign origin who are still denied regional admission to the professional register by certain professional associations. In Italy the first experiment of multicultural media kicks off during the first half of the eighties: it is Radio Shabi, an information program in Arabic language with music from the Maghreb countries, broadcasted on Friday nights on Milan's Radio Popolare. The same radio, among others, also broadcasted Los Aretes que faltan to the moon, a weekly afternoon show of music, culture, and news from Latin America, while Rome's Radio Città Aperta broadcasted El Guayacan, another weekly show in Italian and Spanish, in addition to being dedicated Latin American music, news, culture, and policies, they also discussed issues related to the problems of immigration. Among the latest broadcasts, Radio Popolare, in collaboration with the Yalla Italy second generation blog, the Life publishing group, on Thursday evenings broadcasts "Pop Generation". To date, the multicultural initiatives surveyed by Cospe are 146: 63 newspapers, 59 radio and 24 television programs. The majority of newspapers and radio and television programs are produced in the North and Centre: a concentration caused by both the higher presence of immigrants and the stronger support of local authorities.<sup>132</sup>

More general and demanding at the same time, however, are the statutory purposes pursued by these associative subjects, given that out of the 1,181 associations from which it was possible to gather information about it (this is 56% of the totality mapped), 8 out of 10 (79.3%) work to promote the integration of migrants and about three-quarters (73.9%) to promote and encourage the cultures of origin of the latter. Alongside these two main approaches there is intercultural mediation, pursued by just under half (44.6%) of the associations that responded, followed by education (34.5%) and legal assistance and protection for migrants (30.6%), according to a funnel-like scheme, so that the recurrence of of any individual aim decreases as they require increasingly specialized services. The last major statutory purpose detected with some frequency is the fight against discriminations associated with migrant condition, which are - as is known - the most glaring and "primitive" (as, for example, those relating to physical features or skin color or how to dress and express oneself, which are the foundations of what can be properly described as racist or xenophobic sentiments) to more subtle and systemic ones (structural confinement to more strenuous, precarious, underpaid and not contractually guaranteed niches of the labor market; structural foreclosure of certain fields and employment levels, with blocked social mobility; lack of recognition of qualifications and titles; denial of access to certain welfare measures etc.).<sup>147</sup> As part of a specific research activity on the subject<sup>148</sup>, 12 organizations across the country have been selected on the basis of the following criteria: seniority and stability of the association, entrenchment at the local level, in terms of visibility and recognition by both institutions and citizens, foreign or not, degree of operational ability, number of activated programs, degree of effectiveness and efficiency of the activated interventions.

Anolf is mainly engaged in providing assistance with regards to the satisfaction of basic needs related to reception and inclusion, as well as guiding immigrants in the use of services, thereby facilitating the relationships with public administrations. The relationship of the user with the association is often of the opportunistic kind: as soon as the services are no longer needed, the relationship is ended, or participation is contingent on that of other friends or countrymen. Associazione Baktalo Drom (Baktalo Drom Association) – Sicily It is a mixed association whose members include foreign nationals of different nationalities as well as Italian citizens. It is connected to ARCI (Associazione Ricreativa e Culturale Italiana – Italian Recreational and Cultural Association) and this certainly gives it a social projection, visibility, and a greater prominence than others associations. From ARCI it also takes the spirit and purpose: the association's activities extend all-around and range from social and cultural initiatives, to forms of support and assistance to the initial reception, from the definition of socio-labor pathways of inclusion, to the promotions of forms of empowerment and the identification of actions related to inter-culture and mutual processes or knowledge and comprehension of the host society. The presence of second generation foreign nationals is widespread: young people see in the association a place to structure their identity as cross-cultural subjects. Associazione Comunitaria Filippina (Filipino Community Association) – Sicily The association is composed exclusively of Filipinos and is dedicated to providing support and assistance to their countrymen. The aim is to act as a link between Filipinos and Italian institutions, but also to be a meeting and reference point for the whole community. Second generation Filipinos also contribute to the life of the association, interested in reconstructing historical and cultural ties with the country of their parents and feeling useful to newcomers, also by virtue of their role as bridge figures with the hosting context.

The ARN, by its nature, is mainly engaged in the promotion of information on asylum addressed to asylum seekers/refugees, institutions, and society at large, as well as in the implementation of projects to promote the reception and integration of refugees in Naples. It is thus a very focused and targeted activity destined to a specific target, which comes from the awareness (since they were experienced firsthand) of the difficulties an asylum seeker meets and that sense of abandonment and loneliness that threatens to fall onto oneself pending the decision. Being a recently founded association, composed of refugees and oriented to a specific topic area, the components are all first generation immigrants. Società Cooperativa Sociale Onlus Dadaa Ghezo (Dadaa Ghezo Social Cooperative Onlus) – Campania The association is composed of foreigners as well as Italians and operates solely for the benefit of women, alone or with children, in a state of distress and difficulty, by satisfying their basic needs for the initial reception (housing, regularization of legal status, legal support) but also to develop, for their children as well, paths of integration into society (work, school, socialization). Immigrants who are part of the association are only first generation. However, some initiatives and actions in the area were carried out with the involvement of the second generation, considered a crucial bridge of knowledge between newcomers and the host society. Associazione di Volontariato A.I.U.D.U. By statute, the participation of Italian citizens is also possible. The association deals with Ukrainian women and their family problems. It also provides services and support to their children. Together with the Naples Municipality, they financed a project for a school for Ukrainian children, and the association is working to reach an agreement with the Ukrainian Ministry of Education in order to have a recognition at home of the title achieved by Ukrainian children. The second generations are under-represented, they are recipients of interventions rather than actors in the association. A.C.S.I.M. was founded in 1997 by the will of its four founding members and now has over 70 associates of different nationalities. The aim of the association is to help the local population with regards to the new citizens by promoting mutual understanding between them, starting from teaching the Italian language to foreigners, as a first and essential bridge between different people, promoting the meeting of cultures, a parallel path of reception, support, and solidarity, making diversity an asset for all. The contribution of the second generation is limited for now, although the association is particularly attentive to the evolution of issues related to the matter. Associazione Donne Senegalesi (Senegalese Women Association) – Emilia Romagna The association is located at the Zonarelli Center in Bologna and mainly develops cultural activities aimed at strengthening the leadership of immigrant women, prevent and combat situations of distress and weakness that affect them. There are numerous difficulties that foreign women, more than men, encounter in the social inclusion process: problems of isolation, few opportunities to learn Italian, difficulties in accessing the labor market, difficulty of communication with institutions. Other issues concern the evolution of family patterns, distress in the relations between the different roles in the immigrant family, the problem of motherhood lived in conditions of separation from their children. The starting point of the association and its founders was the awareness of the fundamental role of mediation and women as a "bridge" to promote inclusion. For this reason, the Senegalese Women Association has been focused on cultural activities, considered an excellent tool for promoting integration, fighting against social exclusion and the cultural marginalization of migrant women. Their activities include workshops on women's knowledge, ethnic cooking classes, parties and

(figures and % of migrants and/or persons with the specific ethnic or other background as members, or descriptive data if statistical data is not available).	According to the mapping carried out in Italy between February and June of 2014 by the IDOS Center for Studies and Research, the active migrant associations detected are 2,114. The number of associations surveyed, equal to more than twice that which was found in recent previous surveys, takes into account all associations, de facto or recognized, which have one of the following requirements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Have been founded by migrants and/or children of migrants (young people from a migrant background, or second generation);</li> <li>- Or the majority of whose members is made up of migrants and/or children of migrants;</li> <li>- Or for which the Council has formed a majority of migrants and/or children of migrants.</li> </ul> Within the country, the distribution of the associations mapped corresponds essentially to that of migrants as a whole. With 772 migrant associations, the North-West is home to the far more substantial share (36.5%), ahead of the North-East with 558, the Centre with 471, the South with 199 and finally the Islands with 67.<sup>149</sup> Analyzing the territorial distribution of associations of the main nationalities of reference, we can observe - concerning the 10 most represented nationalities - that the associations of: - Senegalese over a third in Lombardy (36.5%, equal to 46), more than one in eight in Veneto (13.5%, equal to 17) and a little less than a tenth in Emilia-Romagna (8.7%, equal to 11), immediately followed by Tuscany (7.1%), Piedmont and Trentino Alto Adige (5.6%); - Moroccans over a quarter in Lombardy (28.0%, equal to 35), just under a fifth in Emilia-Romagna (18.0%, equal to 23) and about one eighth each in Trentino Alto Adige (12.8%, equal to 16) and Piedmont (12.0%, equal to 15); - Peruvian over two fifths in Lombardy (41.0%, equal to 43), about a fifth in Lazio (21.9%, equal to 23) and over a tenth in Piedmont (11.4%, equal to 12); - Albanians just under one fifth in Piedmont (18.4%, equal to 18), about 15% both in Lombardy and in Trentino Alto Adige (15 each) and over a tenth in Emilia-Romagna (11); - Ecuadorians half in Lombardy (49.3%, equal 37), about a quarter in Liguria (24.0%, equal to 18) and one eighth in Lazio (12.0%, equal to 9); - Moldovans over a third in Veneto (36.1%, equal to 26), about a seventh in Lazio (13.9%, equal to 10) and about one eighth in Emilia Romagna (12.5%, equal to 9); - Ukrainians about a third in Lazio (33.8%, equal to 22), almost a quarter in Campania (23.1%, equal to 15) and almost a tenth in both Veneto and Lombardy (9.2% each, equal to 6); - Filipinos two fifths in Lombardy (40.6%, equal to 26), about one sixth in Lazio (17.2% equal to 11) and just under 8% each in Piedmont, Veneto, and Campania (7.8% each, equal to 5);

Besides, almost half of all the associations that responded (46.0%) has a board of directors formed mostly by immigrants or their children. - As many as three fifths (59.7%) have a number of members that, while greater than 10, is less than 100; only 12.2% have between 100 and 200 members, while another tenth does not even reach 10 members. Those who have more than 500 members represent only 6% overall. The modest average number of members is due to the fact that the associations are often born in a very spontaneous way, from an ideal shared by few in the wider migrant community of belonging. - As many as 8 out of 10 were born from 2000 onwards; in particular, nearly 3 out of 5 between 2000 and 2009 and over a fifth (21.1%) between 2010 and 2014, while only a very small proportion (less than 3%) was formed before 1989. This means that almost all of the migrants' associations surveyed do not exceed 24 years of life and, in particular, 4 out of 5 exist since a maximum of 14 years, which confirms an average life for these realities that rarely exceeds 3-4 decades, also due to the ever-increasing difficulties and restrictions that many of them face in gaining access to economic resources.

These meetings involved the diplomatic-consular representatives of the countries of origin, the relevant institutions in the field of immigration, and the migrant associations of the 16 main communities in the Italian territory (Albania, Bangladesh, China, Ecuador, Egypt, the Philippines, India, Morocco, Moldova, Pakistan, Peru, Senegal, Serbia, Sri Lanka, Tunisia, Ukraine). The meetings, held throughout the country in the period between February and May, were launched February 12,

The IN.CO.NT.RO initiative ended June 19, 2014 in Rome, with an event that saw the participation of all communities involved in the initiative. The 16 events were organized for the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy by the IDOS Centre for Studies and Research and funded by the European Fund for the integration of third-country nationals. As part of the initiative, specific in-depth sessions were devoted to the participation of individual migrant communities in the Italian labor market. These meetings were organized for the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy by Italy Lavoro SpA, an in-house agency of the Ministry.<sup>150</sup> The main difficulties for these associations are economic: 60% of them manage a budget of less than €5,000 a year, too little for an ongoing activity in the training as well as the protection field or even simply to socialize. Many rely on an almost nil budget. Another issue is the facilities for the activities: 1 out of 5 does not have them at all; 42% have a free space offered by other organizations or by local authorities, but often only for a few hours a week, or just for meetings. 27% has to rent. But in order to afford a regular monthly expense associations need to rely on loans, and this can only be done by the better structured ones, usually recognized by national registers. These are a small part of the totality, and in general a residual share of the associations that carry out activities in favor of foreigners, among which are predominant those founded and run by Italians. It is the latter, therefore, rather than migrant associations, that are given the (scarce) resources devoted to integration policies. Out of the 2,114 mapped in total, 903 or 42.7% still rely - exclusively or complementary with other channels - to forms of self-financing, thereby committing the members themselves with keeping the structure economically alive; a share still significantly less than half that of the associations contacted (just 41.1%) is unable to access public funds (whether EU, national or local) and only slightly more than one-sixth (17.4%) enjoys private subsidies. Also, often, the criteria to enroll in national registers, such as that of the Ministry of Labour and that of UNAR, are prohibitive for the self-organizations of foreigners, requiring the certification of the experiences which take place mostly in the form of volunteering and thus not documented.<sup>151</sup>

	Do civil society organisations encourage and support membership and participation of migrants and/or their descendants? E.g. through information and raising awareness initiatives in more languages, translation and language support services etc.	The association "Avis", along with Yalla Italy, the second generation blog, promotes blood donation by specifically inviting migrants: the protagonists are young immigrants. "The only blood type is the one who gives." (April 2014). "Sometimes we are seen just as bloody ethnic groups, but this morning we all went to donate blood." This is the most emblematic phrase of the spot for promoting blood donation made by Avis and Yalla Italy. The spot lasts one minute and 28 seconds the protagonists are young immigrants. "They say we are criminals – the young migrants explain in the beginning of the spot - They say that we pollute true Italian traditions". A sort of provocation aimed at overturning stereotypes at the end of the spot, when they say: "Get rid of prejudices, the only blood type is the one that is donated." A spot that also serves to emphasize the widespread sense of responsibility of many immigrant groups, which shine in that they decisively contribute to blood donations in Italy. <sup>152</sup>

In Italy there are no systematic surveys to date at the national level on the characteristics of immigrant participation in associations, voluntary organizations, social associations (Cnel-Codres 2000). <sup>153</sup> Among the associations shines Tuscany's Avis with an investigation on immigrant donors which estimates a considerable increase since 2006, the year of the first survey in which immigrant donors were 669. In fact, according to the survey, today they have become 2409. Since 2010, the increase was of 43%. 53% are men and 47% are women. The survey of 162 municipal offices shows that they are present in 78% of Avis locations in Tuscany and represent 3.1% of the total number of Avis blood donors. <sup>154</sup>

It may be noted that the common thread that ties these experiences is overcoming the tie between citizenship and political rights and granting a space of presence and participation through the establishment of Councils or deputy director roles, as forms of advisory representation for the immigrant population within the institutions provided for under the regulation (D.P.R. n. 394 of August 31, 1999). <sup>158</sup> opportunities for childhood and adolescence (Legge 28 agosto 1997, n. 285, Disposizioni per la promozione di diritti e di opportunità per l'infanzia e l'adolescenza), promotes the integration of foreign students in the schools of the Fifth District of the Municipality of Rome, whose area is considered at risk of social disadvantage and school dispersion. Specifically, the project aims at facilitating the learning of the Italian language for migrant pupils who have recently arrived, at introducing interculture not as a separate subject but as an approach and a set of topics to be developed within one or more subjects in the curriculum, and, finally, at offering quality innovative pilot interventions in order to develop good practices in intercultural education.

The project includes the organisation of Italian language and intercultural education workshops that, through a playful approach, develop cooperation, activities involving students' families, as well as linguistic and cultural mediation interventions.

The initiative is promoted by the Municipality of Rome – Department for the Promotion of Social Services and Health, through the funding envisaged in Law No. 285/1997. The Fifth District of the Municipality of Rome is the authority that implements the initiative.

Priority actions and beneficiaries

The project activated: intercultural education workshops; Italian language workshops for foreign students; co-designing of intercultural workshops with the teachers involved; activities to involve students' families; interventions of linguistic and cultural mediation; and, finally, interventions of linguistic and cultural mediation in the school context. The aim was to facilitate school integration of migrant pupils and their families, as well as effective communication between teachers and families of migrant origin.

The beneficiaries are foreign children aged 3–13, their families, and school professionals.

Reference period: 2011–ongoing

Final results achieved

In recent years, interculture has permanently become part of the Educational Offer Plans (Piani per l'Offerta Formativa, POF), and teachers have become increasingly more autonomous in activity planning. The cultural mediator, who acts as a pedagogical advisor and a valuable collaborator of teachers, is now working in schools participating in the project. In some schools, the L2 Italian teacher participates in teacher staff meetings, or the results achieved in the L2 Italian class contribute to a student's final mark. Families, who often remain

		marginalised in school, have been involved in educational programmes. For more information visit: www.minori.it/banche-dati-285.
	Are there provisions for bilingual education? If yes, is it supported by trained teachers and training programmes, curriculum provisions and dedicated school manuals and books?	In Italy there are some pilot projects. The positive practice that involves the schools in the Lombardy region stands out, with the logic underlying the EIB/IBI Project being not so much representing a "special project", but rather aiming at becoming a resource available to all schools who wish adopt it. "Bilingual Education Italy/Italian Bilingual Education (EIB/IBI) in primary school" is a project involving the primary schools of Lombardy with teachers who possess B2 Level skills in the English language. The project is organized by USR for Lombardy thanks to an agreement signed on February 25, 2010 with the Directorate General for Educational System and for School Autonomy of the Ministry of Education, University and Research and with the British Council, the cultural body of the British government. Here are the criteria for joining the project: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. presence of teachers with a minimum B2 Level of proficiency in the English language of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages of the Council of Europe.</li> <li>2. availability of school principals and teachers to attend organizational meetings, linguistic and methodological training courses (in person and online), seminars and conferences scheduled by USR for Lombardy.</li> <li>3. involvement of at least 50% of the first classes of the school or school complex.</li> <li>4. guarantee of continuity for the entire five-year period to the children that begin bilingual education in the first year of primary school.</li> <li>5. minimum amount of hours dedicated to English equal to 25% of weekly hours.</li> </ol> The project started in February of 2010 with the language testing of teachers from six schools in Lombardy selected from 42 schools that had applied and was activated starting from the school year 2010/12. A summative evaluation will be carried out when the Pilot Group 1 will reach the first year of Secondary School in June 2015. This assessment, however, will not represent the culmination of the project itself, but the real point of departure, in light of an expansion of the project.<sup>167</sup>

The total quota available for the incentives for projects related to at-risk areas (art.6 CCNL 29/11/2007) with a strong migratory process and against school emargination is defined and equal to € 29.73 millions and will be distributed according to criteria and parameters to be defined by a specific CCNI.<sup>170</sup> The presence of an increasing number of pupils from families of non-Italian mother tongue in Italian Academic Institutions forces them to face communication problems that must be resolved in a simple and organized manner, to ensure that each student realizes the constitutional provisions of his own right to education, and to allow the school to use appropriate tools to facilitate the process of acceptance and integration of all students. "I speak your language", through information technology, proposes to all educational institutions a collection of models for the communications between the school and the family, with the aim of facilitating the full integration of pupils whose mother tongue is not Italian. Thus some models of the most frequently used communications between school and home were created in the four most common European languages (French, English, Spanish and German) and in the most common languages of immigration (Romanian, Albanian, Arabic, Chinese, Hindi, Portuguese, Russian). Translations, of course, are proposed and not imposed. Each school can decide to extend them, correct them and adapt them as part of its responsible autonomy. The realization of the models has been possible thanks to the generous contribution of many people who have understood the purpose of the project and have made sure it would come true. This is why a special page of this website is dedicated to them.<sup>171</sup>

The positive experience of the "Multilingual and Intercultural Curriculum" completed in the 2011-2012 school year at the Daniele Manin Comprehensive School of Rome motivated the recurrence of educational program as an activity to be carried out across the board in several classes, with the joint work of a team of teachers from different classes and different areas of expertise, with the involvement of the parents. The research-action will rely on the analysis of the social context in which the children are raised. The strongly intercultural and multilingual environment of the entire Manin School promotes the implementation of this research, requested by the Ministry of Education and USR-Lazio in view of a nationwide renewal of educational curricula. The collaboration of the class' parents, which will aim at promoting the inclusion of migrant pupils, will be necessary in order to gather data on the linguistic backgrounds of parents as well as general information for the realization of a linguistic autobiography for every child, to be enhanced through: - an education characterized by the respect of differences between pupils, appraised in their individuality and family background; - a policy of acceptance specified in the School's POF as an extremely valuable asset for the education and cultural development of the pupils. Nevertheless, with regard to teacher regular curricula/training in second-level university courses (masters) it is expected that specific educational objectives are reached, but not in the basic path. Moreover, once the title is achieved and the labor market has been entered, teachers do not have any specific obligations to continue with their education. Updates and continuous education are at the discretion of the individual teacher and the individual school.<sup>172</sup>

The intended purpose is the foundation "in young generations of a civic-social and citizenship culture which entwines its sight at the local and regional level with broader horizons at the national, European, and international levels, resulting in a conscious undertaking of the framework of values expressed in the Constitutional Charter, which inspires attitudes, behaviors, and daily practices". The education towards citizenship and the rights/duties of active citizenship thus provides for several thematic groups, which also include safety in the school community and in civil society, the ethics of individual and social responsibility, as stated in the MIUR-INAIL-MLPS Charter of Intents of 24/06/2010 (enclosed), and based on the provisions of the Law no. 123 of 2007 and the D.L. no. 81 of 2008. As implementation of the above, the Ministry of Education, University, and Research, in collaboration with ANSAS (Agenzia nazionale per lo sviluppo dell'autonomia scolastica – national agency for school autonomy development) undertakes actions designed to promote projects of organizational and educational innovation on the topic: "Citizenship, Constitution, and Safety". These projects, proposed by schools of any level and order in the national education system, exercising and promoting school autonomy, aim at making students gain awareness and responsibility towards the value of safety, intended in its multidimensional and interdisciplinary sense, in response to basic needs such as education, health, work, healthy environment, sustainable development, social cohesion. On the one hand there are regions that have matured and consolidated over time successful inclusive policies; on the other hand there are regions that only in recent years have been active in this regard. To complete the general picture, there is UNAR, the body responsible for guaranteeing the rights and the fight against discrimination that despite the good results achieved over the years does not yet enjoy special autonomy and this highlights the limits of its action, reflecting a lack of maturity in the implementation of anti-discrimination legislation.<sup>176</sup> On February 24, 2015, the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance (ECRI) published its conclusions on the implementation of some recommendations made in the report on Italy, published February 21, 2012 and selected for mid-term evaluation procedures.<sup>177</sup> The progress that ECRI intends to verify concerns, among others, the recommendation made to the Italian authorities of formally extending its powers so that the relevant legislation clearly covers discrimination based not only on ethnic origin and race but also on colour, language, religion, nationality and national origin; by granting it the right to bring legal proceedings; and by ensuring that its full independence is secured both in law and in fact. ECRI wishes to stress in this regard that UNAR must also be provided with all the necessary human and financial resources, in the light of its workload. Moreover the focus is on taking all necessary steps to ensure that the principle of non-refoulement is fully respected. It urges them to bring their pushback (respingimento) policy to an immediate and permanent end. In this connection, it emphasises the need to guarantee access to asylum procedures in full accordance with the 1951 Geneva Convention, the European Convention on Human Rights and the relevant EU directives.

3.9. Use of funding instruments (EIF, ERF, EMIF)

	Please provide briefly information and documented insights about the allocation and distribution of funds aimed at supporting political and social participation, and active citizenship measures for migrants and/or their descendants.	Public funding for social care in Italy has been declining in a significant way with the government's provisions over the last two years, with a significant impact on expenditure items destined to immigrants and integration policies. For inclusion policies, there are three different public sources of funding: local funds i.e. those in the Municipal and Regional budgets, national funds (decided at the central level) and European funds (awarded by the European Commission).

Local funds

According to the Istat census survey on services and social interventions, in 2010 only 2.6% of social spending supported by Italian Municipalities (in their budgets) has been used to promote action on behalf of immigrants and nomads, totaling 184 million Euros. It concerns various services: professional social work, cultural mediation, home care, economic contributions and residential structures.

(Istat, 2013, Gli interventi e i servizi sociali dei comuni singoli e associati – Anno 2010, Istat Roma, 31 maggio 2013).

Alongside the scarcity of funds there are marked differences between geographical areas as well, probably linked to the directors' political orientation, the different efficiency of public administrations, the possibilities of coordination between center and suburbs, and the different offers provided by the production contexts.

National funds

The National Fund for migration policies was active until 2009, which provided for an annual budget to be divided between the central government and the regions. For the year 2001 the resources available were a total of 56.4 million euros, while the last year of funding was in 2011 with resources of 33,5 million euros. In ten years, the Fund has financed interventions of various kinds, promoted by Local Authorities and managed mostly by Third-Sector Organizations: soup kitchens, hospitality, intercultural development education, services offered by the permanent territorial councils, activities in the sports sector, initiatives for religious freedom and against forced prostitution or racial discrimination. The exclusion of the Fund from funding in 2011 highlights the lack of attention for social inclusion policies of foreign citizens with respect to the resources allocated for the containment of immigration: for CIEs alone 236 million euros were allocated in the year 2013, 220 million in 2014 and 178 million in 2015.

Among the responsibilities of the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy in the field of Immigration is the promotion of initiatives aimed at encouraging the process for the social integration of migrants, realizing them in collaboration with

The goal of the project is to promote innovative tools for the development of the autonomy of young foreign non-EU women through personalized routes and territorial networks of services. The courses consist of customized integrated packages of services designed, first of all, to incorporate the young migrants into the Italian training, work and social circuit, by promoting their active participation in educational activities and looking for a job; but also to enable them to obtain the necessary requirements for the conversion of their residency permit once they come of age, as provided for in Article 32 of the Immigration Law. In the personalized paths of use of the services the young migrants were accompanied by a tutor who had the task of taking charge of the person and finding integrated solutions for their specific needs. There are additional services, assisted by mediators, in four areas: legal and administrative assistance (necessary to obtain the documents for permanent residency in our country), coaching and psychological support (aimed at enhancing the skills and potential of the person, but also at facilitating access to health care facilities), support in the search and finding of a house, cultural and recreational activities. Integration of migrants through sports and the fight against discrimination<sup>187</sup>. In light of the crucial role that sports play for integration, a program agreement was signed between the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy and CONI. As part of this cooperation was the intention of preparing a Manifesto of Sports and Integration, an awareness campaign and a series of events dedicated to the issues of integration. The fundamental aim of the portal is to provide migrants with information on integration services: Italian Language, Home, Work, Health, Intercultural Mediation, Foreign minors and second generations. The portal is also the go-to point for national integration policies, favoring the connection of information between the government (central and local) and private entities and private social organizations working in the field. Among the main activities aimed at developing networks with both the institutions dealing in various capacities with migration, as well as with the industry, we highlight: the network established with the associations listed in the Register, with municipalities and their ANCI network, with the Regions and Autonomous Provinces and with the Unions (present with over 4,200 immigration centers available on the Portal) in order to increase the service area of the Portal; the signing of the Framework Agreement with the Reggio Emilia Municipality, leader of the Intercultural Cities European Programme; meetings, under the "Direct line with the second generation" initiative, with representatives of associations of young people from a migrant background; meetings at the regional level with migrant associations of the main foreign communities in Italy for their direct involvement in an empowerment perspective.<sup>189</sup> The IN.CO.NT.RO (Migrant Communities Meetings Work Integration)<sup>190</sup> series of events has ended.  The initiative promoted by the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy has involved 16 migrant communities.

In the framework of the priorities established in the European Agenda for the Integration of third-country nationals, particularly in reference to "integration through participation", the IN.CO.NT.RO initiative included two lines of action: the first aimed at promoting the active participation of migrants and their associations, the second aimed at qualifying the presence of such associations within the Migrant Integration Portal. The "Migrant Integration Portal project: living and working in Italy" is part of Action 4 "Information, communication and awareness" of the 2012 annual program of the European Fund for the integration of third Country nationals (EIF). For the first line of action, 16 meetings<sup>192</sup> were held, each dedicated to a community (Albania, Bangladesh, China, Ecuador, Egypt, the Philippines, India, Morocco, Moldova, Pakistan, Peru, Senegal, Serbia, Sri Lanka, Tunisia Ukraine) and targeted both at a direct listening and sharing of experiences, needs and demands, as well as at the presentation of tools and knowledge resources available on the Portal. The meetings were held from February to May and involved the diplomatic-consular representations of the countries of origin, as well as Italian and international institutions and over 160 migrant associations active throughout the country. The final event<sup>193</sup>, which was held last June 19 in Rome, involved all the migrant communities which participated in the initiative and focused on different themes (such as associations and representation<sup>194</sup>, culture<sup>195</sup> and sports<sup>196</sup>, second generations<sup>197</sup>, foreign entrepreneurship in Italy), on which the representatives of the migrant associations and the Italian and international institutions confronted each other. ## 4. Social cohesion and community relations

4.1. Social cohesion policies

	Does the national integration legal and policy framework refer to social/community cohesion? Is there a clear definition of social/community cohesion? Please report it here – in original language and in full English translation.	In Italy, the concept of social cohesion is represented by integration, and at national level there is no well-defined legal, political, and social framework targeted at migrants and their descendants. Programming in this field currently consists of the 'Plan for a safe integration. Identity and discussion' launched in 2010 (Ministry of Labour and Social Policies, Directorate General for Immigration) and of the more recent Integration Agreement prepared along the lines of the 'European forms'. Through this Integration Agreement, Italy too, in cooperation with Regions, local authorities, and all the social actors concerned, actively commits to offering Italian language courses, and civic education and training to be held at the Immigration One-Stop Shops (Sportelli Unici per l'Immigrazione) of the Prefectures. Such documents do not make explicit reference to the 'social cohesion' issue; however, they refer to the Charter of citizenship and integration (2007). The template for the integration agreement to be concluded between the foreigner and the State, in addition to envisaging the foreigner's duties in Article 1, contains his/her declaration to adhere to the Charter of citizenship and integration referred to in the Decree of the Minister of the Interior of 23 April 2007 (Decreto del Ministro dell'Interno 23 aprile 2007); by this declaration the foreigner commits to respecting the principles of the Charter. The decision

		to draft the Charter of citizenship and integration was made in 2007 with the aim of summarising and clarifying the fundamental principles of our legal system that regulate community life of both citizens and immigrants, trying to focus on the main problems linked to the integration issue. The Charter, drafted pursuant to the principles of the Italian Constitution and of the most important European and international human rights charters, puts particular emphasis on the problems that multiculturalism poses to western societies. The Charter makes reference to social cohesion, though without providing an express definition thereof.<sup>204</sup>
	Are there any specific measures in place to strengthen social cohesion? Please refer to promising practices and examples of challenges. Use the template for promising practices in Annex 7 highlighting the most important and/or successful.	Specific measures to strengthen social cohesion are enforced at local level. The website 'Integrazione migranti. Vivere e lavorare in Italia' (Migrants' integration. Living and working in Italy) of the Ministries of Labour and Social Policies, and of Education, University, and Research hosts a selection of a range of specific measures to support integration, regarding: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- school (Practices to be shared for foreign minors' school integration<sup>205</sup>);</li> <li>- job and training (Practices to be shared for foreign citizens' socio-occupational integration<sup>206</sup>);</li> <li>- equal opportunities (Practices to be shared for women's socio-cultural integration<sup>207</sup>);</li> <li>- other practices (Practices to be shared for foreign citizens' language and social integration<sup>208</sup>).<sup>209</sup></li> </ul> A selection of such experiences is contained in Annex 7.
		Are there indicators used by authorities to assess, monitor and support social cohesion policies? (2009), Legal, social and intimate belonging: Moroccan and Albanian second generation migrants in Italy, UCL-WPN, Working Paper No. 05/2009 The paper explores how second-generation youths in Italy are creating and re-elaborating their life plans and sense of identity and belonging amidst the many pressures, influences, and legal/social barriers they encounter in their daily lives. Following recent anthropological theorisations of identity and belonging, the project aims to highlight the importance of acknowledging the many, interrelated and multilayered, factors which impinge on second generations' lives and identity formation, and argues how classical theories of integration – conceptualised as a straight line which runs from 'parents' culture' to 'host country's culture' – are theoretically inadequate. The paper integrates the existing literature on second-generation migrants with fieldwork conducted in northern Italy during the summer months of 2008 with young adults of Albanian and Moroccan origin, and discusses sense of belonging and identity formation with reference to legal and social exclusion and the intimate spheres of sexuality and male-female relationships, highlighting how Italy's specific political, legal, and social context

(2010), Local identities, incorporation and identification of Albanian immigrants in Florence, Sussex Centre for Migration Research, Working Paper No. 60 In this paper, the concepts of city as context, locality, and incorporation are applied to the case of Albanian immigrants in Florence. To date, most research on the incorporation of immigrants and its relationship to space is based on the city or the interrelations between the nation-state and city as contexts where incorporation takes place. The findings of this study show that the relationship between locality and the incorporation of immigrants is multi-dimensional. Firstly, although findings support the role of the urban ethos in immigrants' incorporation, the city is not a homogeneous entity, and should not be equated with locality where immigrants' incorporation is concerned. The importance of locality within the city is highlighted by the role played by the qualities of space and aesthetics in immigrants' incorporation and identification. Also, more attention should be paid to intergenerational perceptions of space, as data presented in this publication show that different generations have different 'cognitive geographies' and varying perceptions of space and appreciations of cosmopolitanism, seen here in relation to locality. These aspects should be seen in relation to the historical, structural, and cultural particularities of the city as a key context of incorporation, without ignoring the national-level politics of immigration and integration.<sup>213</sup> Clough Marinaro, I. and Walston, J. It introduces the themes faced in detail in the contributions themselves. Both conference and articles seek to provide academic analysis, and inform the debate among civil society organisations and policy-makers. It considers the empirical and theoretical problems which the term 'second-generation immigrants' creates in general and in Italy in particular. Four citizens, in cooperation with the Association for Legal Studies on Immigration (Associazione Studi Giuridici sull'Immigrazione, ASGI), filed a complaint with the Tribunal of Turin against the Municipality of Varallo. ASGI complains about the 'obstinacy with which one wants to convey dislike for poverty (we refer to the slogan "No begging here", as if a Municipality could govern through slogans rather than good governance actions) and, above all, dislike for Muslim people who may be led to believe by the big slogan "No burqa here" that a ban on the wearing of burqa, which does not exist in any other town in Italy, is in force in the Municipality of Varallo.<sup>216</sup>

	Are there any specific ethical or other guidelines or rules concerning the language used by media or journalists, when writing about migrants and/or their descendants? In this case please provide briefly information about actual application of such rules and challenges.	Guidelines and rules concerning the language used by the media or journalists when writing about migrants and/or their descendants have been elaborated in the document entitled 'Guidelines for the implementation of the Rome Charter. Working tools for correct information on immigration and asylum issues' (Linee guida per l'applicazione della Carta di Roma. Strumenti di lavoro per un'informazione corretta sui temi dell'immigrazione e dell'asilo).<sup>230</sup> Information about the actual application of such rules, as well as challenges are discussed in the report on the Rome Charter (2014): the discussion on the role of migrants in the media shows that in most cases migrants have a key place in news. However, 'news about immigration is going adrift; it follows mainstream news, often without managing to provide readers, listeners, or TV viewers with an overall picture or the right contextualisation of current phenomena'. Despite the ongoing interest for some stories, and their continuous coverage have led to an increase in thematic news (from 27% in 2012 to 39% in 2013), the majority of news items (61%) are still related to specific short-lasting events: stories about migration, as already said, keep following the flow, pace, and modalities of mainstream news. In the same way, the trend of describing the migrant as 'passive', above all in those news items expressing a favourable stance towards the immigration issue, is confirmed: the migrant, asylum-seeker, or refugee is a passive victim of events, is passively subjected to forced migration, and is a passive recipient of services and initiatives. News items about legislation and governance, and those on migration flows hog the limelight, representing 53% (22% in 2012) and 34% (25% in 2012), respectively, of examined news items. Furthermore, analysing the contents of news items on legislation, we discover that 40% thereof concern the regulation of migration flows, while in the case of governance, 25% of news items are about the Identification and Expulsion Centre of Lampedusa. Therefore, movements of people are at the core of the two largest categories in a cross-cutting way. The abovementioned analysis is strongly influenced by the shipwreck occurred off the island of Lampedusa on 3 October 2013, and the development thereto related (the launch of the Mare Nostrum programme, the debate on Law No. 189 of 30 July 2002, Modifications to rules on immigration and asylum, the so-called 'Bossi-Fini Law' (Legge 30

Unfortunately, this was not the only event of this type, but was the only one that managed to catch the media's attention (no other similar events occurred in the past had managed to). Suffice it to say that in the month of the tragedy, out of the 252 editions of newspapers taken into account, as many as 181 (72%) had the shipwreck and the developments thereto related in the headlines. Or that what happened on 3 October 2013 entailed the prevalence of the dimension of sorrow and empathy in talk shows, to such an extent to mitigate the polarisation of the political debate which is normally extremely polarised in Italy. In-depth analysis, however, is still missing, both in newspapers and on TV: readers or listeners are only seldom given useful tools to understand the phenomenon; story-telling is still anchored to mainstream news.<sup>231</sup>
<h3>4.3.Mixed marriages</h3>
	Mixed marriages is often used as an index for social distance and integration or, even, assimilation. Mixed (citizenship) marriages are defined as those where one of the spouses has foreign citizenship and the other has national citizenship (including registered partnerships, common-law marriages). Please indicate legal limitations, if any, for marriages between nationals and foreigners, e.g. for asylum seekers, third country nationals, etc. Do these limitations result in practical barriers?	In order to get married in Italy to a foreign citizen, it is not necessary to have a residence permit but simply a valid ID document (e.g. passport). The foreign citizen willing to get married in Italy with an Italian citizen, has to present the appropriate marriage authorisation (nullaosta alle nozze) to be issued by the Consulate or Embassy in Italy of his/her country of origin. This authorisation is a document attesting that there are no impediments to the marriage according to the laws of the country of origin. Once obtained the document, the foreign citizen has to go to the Legalisation Office of the Prefecture in order to have the Ambassador's or the Consul's signature certified. If s/he holds a valid residence permit, and resides in Italy, s/he has to request the certificate of unmarried status and the certificate of residence. Then, the foreign citizen, along with his/her future spouse, has to go to the Marriage Office of the Central Register Office (Anagrafe centrale) of the Municipality where s/he resides (if s/he does not have his/her place of residence in Italy, the Municipality will be that of the citizen having his/her place of residence in the country) in order to provide the following documents to be attached to the request for publication of the banns of marriage: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- valid ID document of both future spouses;</li> <li>- birth certificate validated by the Embassy of the country of origin;</li> <li>- marriage authorisation released by the Consulate or Embassy;</li> </ul>

		- stamp-impressed certificate of unmarried status and certificate of residence if the foreign citizen is residing in Italy. The Marriage Office will then publish the banns of marriage, i.e. it will display on the Notice Board (Albo pretorio) of the Town Hall a sheet of paper with the future spouses' names and the place where they will get married. After eight days (including at least two Sundays) from publication, the Marriage Office will issue a certificate attesting that the publication of the banns of marriage has been duly completed. This document must be delivered, within 180 days, to the Civil Registrar (Ufficiale dello stato civile) of the Municipality of residence in order to set the wedding date.<sup>232</sup> Refugees have to submit the following documents to the municipal Marriage Office: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1) a valid residence permit attesting the refugee status (or an expired residence permit along with a document attesting the submission of the renewal application);</li> <li>2) marriage authorisation issued by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). Unlike foreign citizens who are requested to provide the marriage authorisation as set out in Article 166 of the Italian Civil Code, people whose refugee status is recognised in Italy, in order to get married in our country, are not requested to submit such a document, which is issued by the competent authorities of the country of origin, and certifies that there are no impediments to marriage according to the laws of the country of origin.</li> </ol> This exception is based on both Article 12 and Article 25 of the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, signed in Geneva on 28 July 1951, and entered into force on 22 April 1954. Article 12 states that 'the personal status of a refugee shall be governed by the law of the country of his domicile or, if he has no domicile, by the law of the country of his residence'. Alternatively, the political refugee has to apply for the marriage authorisation issued by the UNHCR Office in Italy. This document can be requested for free at the UNHCR premises located in Via Caroncini 19, 00197 Rome, by providing (personally or by post) the following documents: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1) statement in lieu of a notarised document (atto sostitutivo di notorietà) with certification of signature and without stamps, issued by the Tribunal, the Municipality, or a notary, attesting the refugee's place and date of birth and the unmarried status; this document is to be drafted before two witnesses;</li> <li>2) copy of the document attesting the recognition of the refugee status;</li> </ol>

	Are there any official or non-official data and information on mixed marriages (between nationals and people with another citizenship)? Please provide % proportions on the total number of marriages in a given period, as well as data – where available – about ages, country of origin/birth of migrant spouses.	In 2013, 26,080 marriages were celebrated with at least one foreign spouse; they represent 13.4% of the total number of marriages. This share slightly decreased from the previous year. The incidence of marriages with at least one foreign spouse is higher in the areas where the settlement of foreign communities is more stable and rooted, i.e. in northern and centre Regions. In this area of the country, almost one marriage out of five has at least one foreign spouse, while in the south and on the islands, these marriages are 7.0% and 6.7%, respectively, of the total number of marriages. Mixed marriages (in which one of the spouses is Italian, and the other one is a foreigner) were over 18,000 in 2013, and represent the largest share of marriages with at least one foreign spouse (70%). In mixed couples, the most widespread type is the one with an Italian bridegroom and a foreign bride; this type of marriages represents 7.4% of the total average of marriages at national level (14,383 weddings celebrated in 2013) and about 10% in northern Regions. Italian women who have chosen a foreign spouse were 3,890 in 2013, 2.0% of the total number of brides. This is the type of marriages that experienced the most marked decrease in 2009–2010 pursuant to changes in the aforementioned laws. Italian men who in 2013 got married to a foreign citizen, have a Romanian wife in 19.2% of cases, an Ukrainian wife in 11.0% of cases, and a Brazilian wife in 6.2% of cases. All in all, one out of two foreign brides is a citizen of an eastern European country. Italian women who have got married to a foreign citizen, instead, have most often chosen men from Morocco (13.7%), Albania (9.2%), and Tunisia (6.3%). Altogether, as to this type of marriages, almost three out of ten foreign bridegrooms are citizens of an African country.<sup>234</sup>

Reference details	http://www.asgi.it/banca-dati/tribunale-amministrativo-regionale-del-lazio-sentenza-del-9-giugno-2014/
Key facts of the case (max. 500 chars)	Denial of citizenship for marrying an Italian national art. 6 of the. 91/92 law requires that the refusal motivated by reasons of national security be assisted by "proven reasons".
Main reasoning/argumentation (max. 500 chars)	The applicant states in the application that he graduated in engineering and he attended University; he qualified as a PhD structural engineer; married an Italian citizen, employed by the Ministry of Justice; and was granted a permanent employment contract.
Key issues (concepts, interpretations) clarified by the case (max. 500 chars)	The contested measure is justified with reference to the danger and unreliability of the applicant for the security of the Republic.
Results (sanctions) and key consequences or implications of the case (max. 500 chars)	In this context, the appeal must be accepted due to the lack of reasoning defect, deduced in the appeal, while the additional complaints can be absorbed. The expenditure should be compensated, due to subsisting right reasons pending the nature of the dispute. The Regional Administrative Court of Lazio definitively ruled on the appeal, as in the proposed epigraph, accepting it and thereby canceling the contested measure.
Key quotation in original language and translated into English with reference details (max. 500 chars)	With the appeal in the epigraph, the applicant challenges the measure by which the Ministry of the Interior rejected his request for granting an Italian citizenship, presented as pursuant to art. 5 of the 92 law of 1991, for marriage to an Italian.

Thematic area	Long-term residency
Decision date	Regional Administrative Court of Lombardy, ruling of January 14, 2015 n. 128
Reference details	http://www.asgi.it/banca-dati/tribunale-amministrativo-regionale-per-la-lombardia-sentenza-del-14-gennaio-2015-n-128/
Key facts of the case (max. 500 chars)	The work of an administration that disposes the revocation of a long-term residency permit, refusing the update in relation to the absence of a regular relationship of employment and the consequent failure to possess a sufficient income for foreigners to stay in Italy is illegitimate.
Main reasoning/argumentation (max. 500 chars)	The appeal was upheld and, consequently, the annulment of the contested measure has been ordered.
Key issues (concepts, interpretations) clarified by the case (max. 500 chars)	With the contested measure, the central police office in Milan revoked the EC residency permit for long-term residents issued to the applicant on 7.2.2009, in consequence of the lack of income at the applicant's disposal, up to April 2010.
Results (sanctions) and key consequences or	The Regional Administrative Court of Lombardy definitively ruled on the appeal, as in the proposed epigraph, accepting it

implications of the case (max. 500 chars)	and thereby canceling the measure challenged in the epigraph. Expenses to be compensated, except for the unified reimbursement in favor of the claimant.
Key quotation in original language and translated into English with reference details (max. 500 chars)	A long-term permit, according to internal and EU regulations, is issued for an indefinite period, and can be withdrawn only in the cases provided for therein, among which is not included for the state the non-possession of adequate incomes, and the consequent insufficient contribution to the social system.

Thematic area	Work
Decision date	Regional Administrative Court of Campania, ruling of April 16 to May 7, 2014 n. 2482
Reference details	http://www.asgi.it/banca-dati/tribunale-amministrativo-regionale-della-campania-sentenza-del-16-aprile-7-maggio-2014-n-2482/
Key facts of the case (max. 500 chars)	The present appeal relates to the decree of 6.6.2012 prot.n.150 notified on 11/11/2013 by which the Quaestor of Caserta rejected the request for the conversion of a residency permit from humanitarian to dependent employment grounds as presented by the applicant.
Main reasoning/argumentation (max. 500 chars)	The contested measure is based on the fictitiousness of the employment at the foundation of the application, as the employer of the applicant would have been unknown to the address indicated as a workplace.
Key issues (concepts, interpretations) clarified by the case (max. 500 chars)	The applicant produced a contract of employment with the above, as well as the communication of a change in the place of work sent to the previous Administration, after the termination of the employment with the above (the current activity of the applicant as a farm laborer is widely documented).
Results (sanctions) and key consequences or implications of the case (max. 500 chars)	The Regional Administrative Court of Campania (Sixth Section) granted the appeal and annulled the contested measure. It condemned the Ministry of Interior to pay the costs of litigation in favor of the appellant which can be dismissed with €2,000.00 plus accessory legal fees, if due.
Key quotation in original language and translated into English with reference details (max. 500 chars)	The Regional Administrative Court of Campania considered illegal the rejection of the application for the conversion of a residency permit from humanitarian to dependent employment grounds which was presented, and did not consider as adequate evidence the falsity of the employment contract acts deposited in the testimony of a neighbor of the foreign national's employers.

Thematic area	Renewal of the residency permit
Decision date	Regional Administrative Court of Friuli Venezia Giulia, ruling of April 23 to May 13, 2014 n. 206
Reference details	http://www.asgi.it/banca-dati/tribunale-amministrativo-regionale-del-friuli-venezia-giulia-sentenza-del-23-aprile-13-maggio-2014-n-206/
Key facts of the case (max. 500 chars)	Mrs. Elena Coada, a citizen of Moldova residing in Italy, contests the measure indicated in the epigraph with which the authorities refused to grant her the renewal of the residency permit for employment due to a lack of fulfillment of the requirement of a self-sufficiency income.

Main reasoning/argumentation (max. 500 chars)	To this end, she represents and documents, with a production that is filed in the records, the following circumstances: to have an ongoing relationship of permanent employment as a domestic worker, to live in a suitable accommodation with her sister, to have received two additional proposals for employment.
Key issues (concepts, interpretations) clarified by the case (max. 500 chars)	There is no doubt that the possession by foreigners of sufficient means of subsistence in order to enable a dignified existence, is a fundamental condition for the issuance and renewal of residency permits. It is important that the sisters live together, thereby constituting a single registry family.
Results (sanctions) and key consequences or implications of the case (max. 500 chars)	The Regional Administrative Court of Friuli Venezia Giulia (First Section), definitively ruled by granting the appeal. Expenses to be fully compensated, except for the unified compensation that the defending Administration will reimburse the claimant to the extent actually paid.
Key quotation in original language and translated into English with reference details (max. 500 chars)	The Regional Administrative Court of Friuli Venezia Giulia clarifies that, in relation to the verification of the income in order to renew a permit for dependent employment, the regulation resulting from the combined provisions of Article 4, paragraph 3, and Article 5, paragraph 5, Legislative Decree n. 286/1998 does not restrict the type of source of livelihood for the foreigner.

Thematic area	EC long-term residency permits
Decision date	Regional Administrative Court of Lazio, ruling of March 13 to May 27, 2014 n. 5660
Reference details	http://www.asgi.it/banca-dati/tribunale-amministrativo-regionale-del-lazio-sentenza-del-13-marzo-27-maggio-2014-n-5660/
Key facts of the case (max. 500 chars)	Issuance of a EC long-term residency permit (former residency card). The Regional Administrative Court of Lazio clarified that the occurred recognition by a competent medical board of a civil disability requiring continued assistance (Parkinson's disease) should in fact have led to a different assessment of the case.
Main reasoning/argumentation (max. 500 chars)	In addition, the Administration should suspended the proceedings in question, pending the conclusion of the separate proceedings for the recognition of civil invalidity and subsequent actual allocation of the disability check.
Key issues (concepts, interpretations) clarified by the case (max. 500 chars)	In regard to the income requirement, the copy of the tax returns or CUD form issued by the employer for the previous year cannot be applied to the particular situation in which the income comes from invalidity checks.
Results (sanctions) and key consequences or implications of the case (max. 500 chars)	The appeal must therefore be upheld and the Administration will have to review its position within a period of ninety days from the notification of this ruling. There is good cause to compensate the expenses.
Key quotation in original language and translated into English with reference details (max. 500 chars)	The delay in the actual reception of the income does not depend on the person concerned who submitted the permit application when the proceedings for the recognition of civil invalidity was already pending, which then had a favorable outcome on 16.3.2012. The Administration should thus have suspended the proceedings in question, pending the conclusion of the separate proceedings for the recognition of civil invalidity.
